Man, in the Future Lost Life, Not Glory It Is a Thick Fog Canada Puts One Over

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ONE OF THOSE deep, learned Germans, Professor Papp, world authority on evolution, tells what man will be like in the distant future and young ladies will not like the description.

"Ten feet high, head massive and hairless, no teeth, lips thin and pale, brain able to transmit and receive electro-magnetic waves like a radio, X-ray eyes able to see through solid objects."

Nobody can predict what men will be like in future, when the hardest work will be pressing a button, with poverty and hunger unknown, disease conquered, population necessarily restricted by law or, more probably, by nature's processes.

Israel Zangwill said that the great conqueror of the future would be an epileptic, carried around the battlefield on an air cushion, an idea as repulsive as that of the German professor. Nature does not make things uglier. They always improve.

Dr. Papp's suggestion that "the human race will eventually be destroyed by giant insects that will inherit the earth" is a poor guess.

Any entomologist can tell him that their very structure makes it impossible for insects to attain any great size. And any chemist can prove that chemistry will always conquer insect life, unless insects should develop chemists abler than human chemists, which seems improbable.

The courageous Russian scientists who lost their lives exploring the upper regions of the air did not, fortunately, lose the glory to which they were entitled. Nearly all their instruments were smashed when the gas-bag crashed, but the barograph, showing how high the balloon rose, survived the fall. The three young Russians reached a height of 72,178 feet, more than thirteen and a half miles, far above the record.

Americans are now planning to go up 15 miles.

Lloyd George, in an important article, which you will read tomorrow in the "March of Events" section of the Hearst newspapers, says that all Europe, as regards probable war, is like a ship in a fog:

"You hear foghorns sounding all around you, but have NO idea whether they are ahead or in astern, to port or to starboard."

This country is in a similar fog as regards money. Just what we are doing, and why, and whether we are going is guesswork. But we got nothing by standing still, and this country hopes that when the fog lifts, the bright, clear waters of

Ice Hero Meets Painful fate at Garden

FAY MUST FIGHT RUDY IN N. Y.

Harvey Bennett, Stoneham high's crack defenseman, had to be carried off the ice by his mates after being badly hurt when knocked down during a scrimmage in front of the net in the game against Rindge Tech at the Boston Garden this afternoon. Bennett received his injury preventing a Rindge score and, due to his efforts, Stoneham won the tilt. Story on Page 13

Mae West Target for Acid Plot

Los Angeles, Feb. 3—Mae West, screen star, is being heavily guarded today from Chicago gangsters who, it is alleged by the district attorney's investigators, are plotting to disfigure her with acid.

Revenge is the motive of the plot, they say. Revenge for her daring to go on the stand and testify against Edward Friedman, alleged gangster who was convicted today by a jury of robbing Miss West of $15,600 in jewels and money.

Friedman was found guilty of second degree robbery, chiefly, the police say, on Miss West's testimony which she dared to give before the grand jury and again in open court.

TELEPHONE THREATS

Since her first appearance before the grand jury threats have been telephoned Miss West—threats of revenge by gangland.

A police guard was established today as soon as the investigators heard the plot to use acid.

"I can get along without my diamonds, but I don't dare let anything happen to my face," declared Miss West.

This remark immediately after the robbery is said to have inspired the plot today.

Three men were indicted in the robbery of Miss West in which she lost $15,600 in jewels and cash. Friedman was identified by Miss West as the man who held the gun. He confessed later to the

BIG TRUCK KILLS CAMBRIDGE BOY

Crushed under a five-ton truck, Nathan Kennon, 9, of 2 Pearl ter., Cambridge, was instantly killed today a short distance from his home.

The child ran from the sidewalk apparently to cross the street, witnesses said, when the machine struck him.

A police ambulance from the Central sq. station rushed him to the Cambridge City Hospital. He was pronounced dead upon arrival. Doctors said death was instantaneous. The child sustained a skull fracture, internal hurts and other injuries.

Alexander L. Candage of Webster st., Quincy, the truck driver, will be technically charged by police with manslaughter, it was said.

Candage told police he did not see the child until the screams of a woman attracted his attention to the boy under the vehicle.

BULLETIN

In a dramatic and secret police lineup, employes of the Needham Trust Co., scene of yesterday's fatal holdup, and employes of the Wollaston branch of the Quincy Trust Co. and the Brookline Trust Co., which were also robbed in the last few months, this afternoon confronted John Curran, suspected gunman. No announcement was forthcoming as to whether any of them had identified Curran, arrested earlier in the day, as a suspect in the Needham holdup. The lineup was held in the office of Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to Police Commissioner Hultman. Detectives stood in line with Curran.

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

A detail of 20 Boston policemen, equipped with shotguns, tear gas bombs and bullet-proof vests, raided a Dorchester house shortly before noon today and arrested the first suspect in yesterday's machine-gun holdup of the Needham Trust Co.

He was John H. Curran, alias James F. Curran but better known as Carroll, of 37 Peacedale rd., Dorchester, tentatively identified as one of the machine gunners who invaded the bank, killed one man, wounded three others, kidnaped two bank officials and escaped with $14,500.

To spur the search for the robbers, Lieut.-Gov. Bacon, acting in the absence of Governor Ely, this afternoon announced a reward of $20,000 for evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of those guilty of the assault, robbery and killing.

The reward order was approved by the Governor's Council, after three hours of radio communication with Governor Ely, aboard the Cunarder Mauretania in West Indian waters. Ely sanctioned the reward.

Curran, or Carroll, who was pointed out to the police by bank employes when they inspected rogues' gallery photographs, was also being sought for the $18,000 holdup of the Wollaston branch of the Quincy Trust Co. last December.

The man is also wanted by the Washington, D. C., police in connection with a bank holdup there. Two Washington inspectors are now in Boston and will view him on their return to headquarters.

It was at first believed he also was wanted in Philadelphia for a restaurant robbery, but a comparison of his finger-prints with those furnished by the Pennsylvania authorities eliminated that charge.

Curran incidentally, is known to have been very friendly with two of the most successful detectives on the Boston force, often having been seen in conversation with them in the North End.

Police Commissioner Hultman declared that Curran's name had been on his list of public enemies.

The police detail, under command of Lieut. Edward J. Keating, of Porter incurred the displeasure of Starter George Cassidy when he refused to follow instructions in bringing Regius, a colt owned by his contract employer, Sheldon Fairbanks, up to the barrier.

N. Y. STRIKERS TRY TO 'DUCK' 18 TAXIS

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—Sharp on the heels of a taxi strike leader's warning that a "bloody war" threatens in the city-wide tie-up there came today the most formidable violence of the two-day lockout.

Roving strikers seized 18 cars in the Grand Central area, grabbed the ignition keys and pushed them, driverless, in the general direction of the East River.

Thousands witnessed the sabotage and gave the strikers a wide berth.

Meanwhile, 500 policemen were lined along North River piers, keeping back pickets who threatened operators of independent cars.

More policemen were held in reserve.

FAY MUST BATTLE RUDY IN NEW YORK

Justice Lydon, after reading briefs submitted by attorneys for the crooner and his off-the-reservation wife, issued another order vacating his original one and stating that he would not have signed it had he known all the facts.

As the matter now stands, Fay, seeking to concentrate her fight in the California courts, must also battle it out on the New York front.

15 ARE DRIVEN OUT IN HYDE PK. BLAZE

Fifteen persons were driven from the "Maple House" apartments, at 196 Fairmount ave., Hyde Park, this afternoon, when fire in a defective flue pipe on the second floor spread to the roof.

Two alarms were sounded as the flames spread through the second and third floors and smoke blanketed the entire district. Damage was estimated at $7000.

The battle with the blaze was a stubborn one, and it was nearly two hours before the flames were under control.

The building, a renovated apartment structure, is owned by Charles Charles, of 1037 River st., Hyde Park. As it was Saturday afternoon and a half-holiday, most of five families were at home when the fire started.

There were exciting scenes as old persons were assisted to the street and women carried their babies to safety. Baby carriages, loaded with household effects, were rushed out when the children were safe.

FIRST SUSPECT IN NEEDHAM ROBBERY SEIZED IN POLICE RAID

CURRAN CAPTURED IN RAID ON DORCHESTER HOME

Banker Sought Here as "Tip Off" for Gangsters; Detectives Warn Other Suburbs of Impending Attacks

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

the Detective Bureau, found the man reading a newspaper and smoking a cigarette. He offered no resistance when the officers burst into the room.

Another suspect, identified through police photographs, meanwhile slipped through the fingers of the police. He is Henry Preston, of 113 Southern ave., Dorchester. When the house was raided, police found that he had just left. They seized several bags, containing 40,000 lottery tickets.

Revere Man Comes In, Clears Himself

James Preston, of Revere, whose picture had been published erroneously as that of Henry Preston, walked into the East Boston police station shortly afterward to clear himself of possible suspicion in the case. He was escorted to Norwood police headquarters, where Arnold McIntosh and John Riordan, the two bank officials kidnaped by the bandits, assured police that he was not one of their captors. He was freed 20 minutes after coming to the police.

Apprehension of the other Preston, the man whose picture was picked out of the rogues' gallery by bank attaches, however was considered imminent when Commissioner Huffman ordered four bullet-proof vests sents to his office and held detectives in readiness for quick action. These actions were interpreted as preparations for another raid on the basis of new information.

State Detectives Roche, Ferarri and Fleming, meanwhile, were questioning a Norfolk County "nigger pool" operator in the Needham police station on their theory that the bank robbers must have had necessary assistance. The man came voluntarily.

Three other "nigger pool" operators, one of them said to be a janitor in the bank and another accompanied by a priest, came to the police station during the afternoon for questioning by the state detectives.

Curran Booked as $20,000 Reward Debated

Curran was booked at Station 18, Mattapan, under the former name even as the Governor's Council was debating the posting of a $20,000 reward for the arrest of the Needham bandits.

From there he was taken to police headquarters. There Stephen Flaherty, head of the detective bureau, turned him over to Supt. Martin King, who in turn sent him to Capt. James F. Daly, superintendent of cases, for questioning while Needham officials were notified of his arrest.

Norfolk County Attorney Also Questions Suspect

Asst. Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County meanwhile went to Hultman's office at headquarters to question the suspect.

Full credit for his capture was given to Patrolmen Robert Warren and Robert Cowen of Station 1, North End, who gained knowledge of his whereabouts and reported it to headquarters. He then sent three details of police to converge on the place under secret orders.

In a further effort to round up the four gunmen, teletype and telephone messages were sent this afternoon asking for the arrest of the occupants of a black Packard sedan, bearing the Massachusetts registration No. 594,135. The order asked that its contents be left untouched and that no fingerprints be added to it.

The car, which is registered to Mario Marcucci of 32 Dexter st., Medford, was stolen in the North End last Thursday.

Police are also seeking a similar car with the New York plate C—19—. Four suspicious men were seen in it in Boston during the week.

Latest clues in the hunt for the state's most formidable bank-up men, meanwhile pointed directly to a well-known Boston banker.

This amazing information was obtained exclusively by the Boston Evening American as Lieut. John Stokes headed detectives in questioning the bank official, said to receive a $15,000 salary.

The fact it was learned, developed from the discovery that at least three banks recently held up and robbed of a total of $76,000 were members of an association affiliated with a Boston bank.

It was also learned that on each occasion except that in Needham, the holdups were staged the day the banks planned to send surplus cash to this city.

In the case of the Needham Trust, $70,000 was lost to the bandits when bank officials shipped it to the Federal Reserve Bank one day ahead of schedule.

Lieut. Stokes' action followed the seven-hour questioning of officials and employes of the Needham Trust Co., immediately after four gunmen had looted it of $14,000, deliberately murdered Patrolman Forbes McLeod, and shot three other men, one of whom is dying.

He discovered that the trust company was a member of the system which included the Brookline Trust Co. and the Quincy Trust, branches of both of which

Serial Numbers of Bank Cash

A partial list of the serial numbers on bills taken yesterday from the Needham Trust Co. was announced at the State House this afternoon as follows:

Ten-dollar bills, numbered consecutively A29842401 to A29842500.

Five-dollar bills, numbered consecutively C46511701 to C46511800.

One-dollar bills, numbered consecutively B38109401 to B38110000.

have been held up and robbed, netting the bandits $62,000.

Holdup Gang Picked Day of Shipments

In each of these instances the holdup men picked the day the banks planned to send heavy shipments of cash to Boston, having made known their intentions to do so in advance.

The Needham Trust, however, Lieut. Stokes learned, had sent its surplus cash shipment the day before the holdup without any previous notification.

If the original schedule had been adhered to, the surplus would have left the bank at 12:30 yesterday. The holdup men made their appearance two and a half hours before that time.

In the meantime a nation-wide hunt was on for the desperadoes who perpetrated Massachusetts first machine gun killing in a holdup, with the entire forces of the state mobilized.

Rewards of $2000 were posted immediately after the holdup, which resulted in the death of Patrolman Forbes McLeod, the probably fatal wounding of Fireman Frank O. Haddock and the shooting of Fireman Timothy Coughlin and Walter H. Bartholomew, 75-year-old vault guard.

The Needham setectmen offered $1000, and Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, as acting governor, put up $1000 from his own pocket.

N. Y. Hideout of Killer Is Watched

From the unnecessarily vicious shooting down of victims, and from other information obtained by state detectives, it was believed the bandits were an out of state "mob."

Although police were looking for two local gangsters, Henry Preston and John M. Curran, state detectives virtually convinced the bandits came from other states.

Curran, who also has used the name of "Carroll," was identified by Needham bank employes as one of the machine gunners. Police have been seeking him since early December, it was revealed, as one of the men who robbed the Wollaston branch of the Quincy Trust Co. of $18,000. He was identified by employes of that bank, along with another man, through rogue's gallery pictures.

Information was obtained that the ruthless sub-machine gun operator who sprayed Officer McLeod with death through the plate glass window of the bank, was a resident of a small city in New York State.

New York State police were covering his "hide" in that city and his arrest was expected within 72 hours.

As a result of other information which detectives obtained, authorities of 30 cities and towns were warned to maintain guards over banks in their communities.

In each of these communities surrounding Boston, a bank has been picked for robbery, it was learned, affording the most nearly perfect getaway location.

Included in the list are said to be the First National Bank in Medford, Framingham National Bank, Malden Trust Co., and Wakefield Trust Co.

Police Guard Posted at Banks in State

Police heads of each of the 30 cities and towns have been warned to station additional officers in each bank, in case the holdups are attempted.

The Medford First National Bank, for example, is located at the corner of Main st., and Riverside ave., Medford sq., with five streets available for the bandit car to speed away.

This information confirmed the belief of detectives that a well-organized "mob" has been working with someone who had an inside knowledge of suburban bank activities.

Despite the fact that no shooting took place in previous bank holdups, the methods are said to have been the same and detectives are virtually convinced they were the same gang.

The shooting, akin in murderous viciousness to those in the Middle West, was also considered by experienced investigators to be evidence of the work of men from out of the state.

In this connection they eliminated Charles A. "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Western desperado, whose picture was said to have been partially identified by a witness.

While the same gang was believed to have been involved in all the recent bank robberies, it was believed that the sub-machine gun operator had not previously participated.

Not only was it the first time that one of these deadly weapons was used, but the callous brutality of the man was also unusual.

It was pointed out that in the Brookline Trust holdup, the bandits coolly awaited until a policeman, responding to the alarm, had entered the bank, and then satisfied themselves by simply disarming him.

In the Needham holdup, Officer McLeod was running up the street in response to the alarm, when the machine gunner struck the muzzle of his weapon through a window pane, and mowed him down.

By the irony of fate, McLeod who had no time to draw his gun, had been given a gold badge for marksmanship the day before he was killed, by State Senator Samuel Wragg, of Needham, an officer of the bank.

McLeod was also a World War hero, having been awarded the Croix de Guerra for bravery while serving with the famous 26th Division in France.

These ruthless acts were capped by the totally unnecessary shooting of Patrolman Haddock and Fireman Coughlin on the street, who were dropped by machine gun fire as the getaway car, carrying Treasurer Arnold McIntosh on the running board as a shield.

Although the big black sedan, carrying stolen number plates, disappeared in the direction of Providence after dropping McIntosh at Needham Heights, police were investigating a report it had been seen in Cambridge.

Alexander Abramvotis, of Calendar st., Dorchester, reported he saw a big sedan containing four men, drive up to the curb and stop in front of a newsboy.

Death Mob Spotted Holdup Scene Days

One of the occupants demanded a paper, for which he tossed the boy a coin. After a rapid glances at it, he was heard to say by Abramvotis: "Hey, it's on the front page."

Some one in the car snapped: "Keep your mouth shut," and the machine drove away. Abramvotis did not get the registration number.

As in the case of the Brookline Trust holdup and others, the Needham Trust stickup was carefully staged and carried out.

The holdup men arrived at the bank half an hour after it opened for business casually parking their car in a diagonal parking space in front.

Officer McLeod was standing in Needham sq., only a short distance away across the railroad tracks, as the Boston-bound train from Needham Heights pulled in. The tracks cross the street only a few feet from the bank, and the cars shut off the institution from the patrolman

Don Masks Entering Counting Room

Apparently the holdup was timed to coincide with the arrival of the train. Treasurer McIntosh was sitting at his desk dictating to Miss Elizabeth Kimball in the enclosure railed off for him in the lobby. Ernest Keith, the assistant treasurer, was in a little office off Treasurer McIntosh's enclosure. In a cage separated from Keith only by a low mahogany and glass partition, Miss Ada Powell was checking card indexes.

At the gate to the safety deposit vaults in the rear of the bank was Bartholomew, while Teller Joseph D. Riordan, son of the former treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, was in his cage. The cage on the other side was empty at the time, while in the next Robert Loker was working on statements.

McIntosh looked up to see a man, adjusting a mask on his face and carrying a revolver, approaching him. Miss Kimball fled into Keith's office as the gunman ordered the treasurer to put up his hands and swing his chair around so that his back was to the wall.

A second man, carrying a sub-machine gun, then entered the bank, sweeping the muzzle in an arc so that it commanded everyone in the place. He was followed by two others, armed with revolvers.

Having collected all the cash visible, amounting to $14,000, the bandit started for the door, taking McIntosh and Riordan with them at gunpoint.

Outside the two men were ordered to mount on the running board of the bandits' car, one on each side, and the big machine got under way. Riordan seized the opportunity to leap to the street and roll under a parked car, thereby escaping a fusillade of shots discharged at him. McIntosh, without hat or overcoat, clung to the machine, with one arm inside the opened window, and a gun pressed against him.

On Chestnut st. the machine with its unwilling pass-ngar, passed the police station at high speed. Racing up Highland ave., the machine gun operator saw Patrolman Haddock on the street and opened fire, dropping him with two bullet wounds.

A second later as the racing machine drew level with fire headquarters, there was another burst of shots and Fireman Coughlin, peacefully shoveling snow, fell badly wounded.

The car continued on to Needham Heights where McIntosh, weakened by his experience, begged to be released. The machine slowed down and as the bank treasurer stumbled to the street and fell, shot away in the general direction of Providence.

The wounded men were rushed to the Glover Hospital in Needham where McLeod died, and where Haddock's condition was regarded as critical. Coughlin was expected to recover and the wounds of Bartholomew were not serious.

Immediately on learning of the holdup, state police were sent to Needham, followed by Boston finger print and photograph experts when a request for their services was made. When the seriousness of the crime was realized Gen. Daniel Needham, public safety commissioner, assigned Detectives John Stokes, Joseph Ferrari and Michael Fleming to stay on the case until the bandits were captured.

Orderly government in Massachusetts has been challenged," Lieut. Gov. Bacon declared in a statement. "At Needham a severe blow was struck at the forces of organized society. This challenge is being met. The entire resources of the Commonwealth are being employed to crush the lawless tyranny of gang rule. The commissioner of public safety has acted promptly and vigorously. The police commissioner of Boston has rendered every possible assistance. The police of other communities are actively co-operating."

He quoted reports of Gen. Needham and Police Commissioner Hultman as to their part in the case, and went on to say:

"Pursuant to the maximum provisions of general laws, Chap. 376, Section 3, I hereby offer a reward of $1000 to any person who in consequence of this offer furnishes information that shall lead to the arrest and conviction of those who perpetrated this outrageous holdup. Pursuant to the terms of the same statute and section, I offer a further reward of $1000 to any person who in consequence of this offer furnishes information that shall lead to the arrest and conviction of those who brutally murdered Police Officer Forbes A. McLeod.

"I regret that the limitation of the law prevents immediate announcement of a much larger offer. I have summoned the Governor's Council to meet Saturday morning. I shall recommend to it that these rewards be increased forthwith to $10,000 each. Every citizen of the Commonwealth is charged with the protection of society. Banditry must be stamped out. The security of life and property must be preserved."

Ex-Circus Acrobat Is Slain in Indiana

Tell City, Ind., Feb. 3 (AP)—The body of Miss Alice Martin, former circus acrobat, was found today in a shallow grave on her 150-acre farm on the banks of the Ohio River. Officers said she had been murdered.

Miss Martin was about fifty. Officers began a search for Ernest Wright, 32, a farm hand who was employed several months ago by Miss Martin.

HOSTESS PICKS GUSTIN GANG AS BANDITS

Phone Call to Boston Police Brings Quiz in Portland

Ruth Hathaway Lake "put the finger" on four members of the Gustin gang as being the Needham bank robbers, when she was quizzed in Portland today.

"I know all the Gustins personally," she said. "And they're all good fellows. But I spotted these guys as gangsters, and several remarks they made lead me to believe they were connected with the Needham job."

Mrs. Hathaway, or Lake, former Cocoanut Grove nightclub hostess, accordingly herself, was detained by police in Portland after she had telephoned Boston police last night and told them what she suspected.

POLICE ROIL HER

She was "all burned up" today, because Boston and Portland police "double-crossed her."

Ruth said she was in mortal terror of being "bumped off for squealing."

"Nobody knows better than I do, how the Gustins treat everybody who squawks. I'm keeping my mouth shut," she said.

Then she explained she was leaving for Boston tonight to give police here detailed information as to what she heard and saw at the nightclub that convinced her the four gangsters were connected with "the Needham job."

CALLED A STRIKING BLONDE

The girl is a tall and striking blonde, with flashing blue eyes. She said she spent 16 years in vaudeville before she began night club work. She's married and doesn't want her husband involved. That's why she wants to "forget the Lake."

"I was a close friend of Charlie DuBois who knocked himself off before they arrested him for killing his wife," she declared.

"I was even with him the night before he did it."

Getting back to the Gustins in "The Villa," Italian night club, where she works, Mrs. Hathaway-Lake said:

"They will probably use the club as an alibi. They were there three or four times during the last week. That probably is not that as a proof they couldn't have done the Needham job.

"But I know them, and I won't tell who they are."

A reporter asked her if she were a "stool pigeon."

"I'll throw you out the —— window if you say I'm a stool pigeon," she replied.

Police officials gave lavish praise to Patrolman William Curley's presence of mind when the mysterious long-distance call came in early this morning and he stalled the woman informant while the call was being traced.

CONFESSES CALL

Radio and the telegraph was quickly put into operation and Portland police rushed to the cafe. The woman was gone but other employes of the place told the officers her identity and address. The squad then went to the address where they found Mrs. Lake about to retire.

Taken to the police station the woman first denied calling the Boston police. A short time later, however, under pressure of questioning, she admitted the call but refused to make another statement.

In the meantime Boston police, learning the mystery woman has a husband here, went to 376 Harvard ave. address where they found Lester Lake, a vaudeville showman, who said he had received a call at his home from his wife in Portland but had not been home when it arrived.

HEAVY FIRING IN HAVANA

Hava, Feb. 3 (AP)—Heavy firing broke out in uptown Havana this afternoon.

No immediate explanation was given for the shooting.

Previously a strike of employes got under way in the Cuban Electric Co.

At 2 p. m. the gas service to the capital was cut off. At 2:45 p. m. the lights in the nearby town of Marianao, owned by the Cuban Electric Co., were suddenly turned off.

Paris, Feb. 3 (AP)—A cold wave swept most of rFance today, after two days of wind and snow storms. Temperatures were below the freezing mark everywhere.

American Fund to Aid Families

FORBES A. McLEOD

The Boston Evening American today launches a fund for the wives and families of the two Needham police officers and the fireman, shot during the machine gun robbery of the Needham Trust Co.

The fund will be collected in conjunction with a similar fund being raised by a citizen's committee, organized in Needham last night at a meeting in which plans for a house-to-house canvass were discussed.

Those who will benefit by this fund and that being collected by the Boston Evening American are Mrs. Margaret D. McLeod, widow of Patrolman Forbes A. McLeod, who was slain in front of the bank; Mrs. Frank Haddock and her four children, family of Patrolman Haddock, who received wounds which are expected to prove fatal, and Mrs. Timothy Coughlin and one child, the family of Fireman Coughlin who also suffered possible fatal wounds in attempting to aid Patrolman Haddock.

Needham citizens will be canvassed beginning today by the citizens' committee there. The members of the committee are Senator Samuel Wragg, F. Murray Forbes, Chairman Parkman D. Howe of the board of selectmen, Police Chief Arthur P. Bliss, T. Robert Quinn, chief of fire department, Thomas Norris and Charles M. Donahue.

Donations to the Boston Evening American may be sent to the Fund Editor, Boston Evening American, 9 Winthrop sq.

Needham citizens will prove their generosity in contributions to their own citizens' committee. The Boston Evening American, however, believes that countless others will wish to show some recognition to the widow of one hero police officer and two other families who may become fatherless.

For this reason the fund is launched to provide aid for the families of those who fell in protecting the lives and safety of other citizens.

McCleod and Haddock were World War veterans. The former was decorated with the Croix de Guerra while serving with the Yankee Division in France.

Even the least of contributions will be helpful and persons be assured that their donation to these funds will be appreciated by the families of the three heroes.

Now it is up to the general public, which means YOU. The Boston Evening American is glad to offer its columns for this medium and appeals to every reader to do his and her part, however small, to aid the cause.

600,000 Sure of Store Jobs

New York, Feb. 3—Steady employment for 600,000 persons in department stores is virtually assured through 1934 by present business indications, it was announced today by the Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association following a survey.

If business continues to improve, many more workers still unemployed can hope to obtain jobs in stores, the survey indicated.

A survey in the 12 Federal Reserve districts, revealed that store operating costs were lower for the first time in four years.

"Economies this promises a greater degree of security than has existed for some years," the association reported. "Many unemployed can hope for positions during the coming year if business continues to improve."

CENSUS TAKERS FOR CWA TOIL IN PEACE

Others on Rolls Fret, but Canvass Well Near Its Goal

At least one sizeable, if humble, CWA group was still toiling quietly at its job today as higher-ups in the federal and state service indulged in nervous speculations concerning allegedly sensational graft and mismanagement exposures to be made next Wednesday to a U. S. grand jury.

The workers who were just working, not fretting, were 2097 girls and women, engaged in winding up a first week's activity on a Massachusetts unemployment census.

SCORN ICE AND SNOW

In spite of snow, ice and weather inclemencies, the feminine census takers, to their headquarters reported today, were well on their checkup of the jobless army from which they themselves were so recently recruited.

Thinly clad and poorly shod, in many instances, the girls and women have, since Tuesday, practically completed preliminary survey of the congested downtown sections, according to Assistant Director Miss Bertha A. Peppeard.

Although complete figures have not yet been compiled, many definite conclusions have been drawn by headquarters statisticians.

CENSUS SHOWS DROP

It has been found that the resident population of the Boston business district is much smaller than it was in the federal census three years ago. The number of firemen, watchmen and similar workers, sleeping in the buildings where they are employed, has been definitely lessened, investigators say. Modernized heating arrangements have eliminated many furnace tenders.

Another discovery is that jobless folk and impoverished folk haven't lost their hospitality with their income. In hundreds of homes, visited on cold days this week, census workers were pressed into acceptance of warm food and hot coffee.

'NOT OUR GUNS,' SAYS NEEDHAM

Commissioner of Public Safety Daniel Needham today scouted the theory that the sub-machine gun used by the bank bandits was one of those stolen from the police exhibit in the Mechanics' building a week ago.

"Witnesses have told conflicting stories," he said. "The gun stolen from the exhibit had no stock, while some of the witnesses of the robbery said the weapon used in the holdup had one."

Needham held conferences today regarding the crime with Michael J. Barrett, captain of state detectives; Capt. James F. Mahoney, head of the uniformed branch of the state police, and Dist. Atty. Edmund Dewing.

State Detectives Fleming, Stokes and Ferrari are working on the Needham case, Needham said, adding that he hopes that the four bandits will be under arrest soon. He refuses to tell what progress has been made by his department in the investigation.

Meanwhile ballistic experts were inspecting bullets fired in the foray for use as evidence when arrests are made.

REAL REST FOR ROOSEVELT

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS)—President Roosevelt planned a week-end of almost complete rest today.

He sent word to his secretaries at the executive offices that he wanted no engagements, and that he didn't want even to see them on any business during the day.

The President remained in his living quarters in the mansion.

5 MORE PAGES OF WAR PICTURES IN TOMORROW'S ADVERTISER

Major General Smedley D. Butler Says:

"No greater service could be done the American people than the work now being carried along by the Hearst newspapers in publishing the horrible pictures of the recent war. Every civilized human being is opposed to war. It is simply a question how best to prolong the period of peace. I am convinced by far the best method is to build a big navy and a huge air fleet. If necessary, twice as big as owned by any other nation. Once we are in possession of this navy and of this gigantic air fleet, we will be in a position to dictate disarmament, and not before."

AUTOISTS SAVE MILLIONS IN GOODWIN INSURANCE PLAN

NEW LIABILITY IDEA CREATES STATE FUND

Sponsor Fears Lobbyists Will Kill Move in Legislature

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Frank A. Goodwin has devised a new system of compulsory liability insurance, which, he says, will save Massachusetts autoists at least $5,000,000 annually.

It is a State fund system, which would be operated by the Registry of Motor Vehicles. He will ask the State to give the idea its sanction at a meeting to be held in the State House, Monday forenoon.

FLAT RATE OF $18.

Every autoist would be charged a flat rate of $18 per year, under the Goodwin plan, whether his car be a Ford, a Buick or a Packard. This is in contrast to the rate of $87 per year now charged in some sections of the State. The rate would be the same, whether the autoist lived in Hyannis or perambulated in the Greater Boston populous area.

"A car is a car, no matter where it is located or where it is operated," says Goodwin. "It regarded by the State as a menace, it is one regardless of where it turns its wheels."

The motor truck would be insured for a yearly fee of $25, as against the $150 rate now in force. Taxis would be charged $100, as compared with the rates which now, in cases, amount to $350 per annum.

These rates would be paid to the State by the autoist as a condition precedent for his right to operate his car on Bay State highways. The State would collect, rather than private insurance companies, as now.

"There would be no long-drawn-out, complex insurance policies, as at present," says Goodwin. "Your certificate from the State would only be necessary."

MONOPOLY FOR STATE

The State would have a monopoly of all personal liability insurance up to $5000. If the autoist desired to be "covered" in larger amounts, and for property damage as well, he would insure for the extra amounts with the State or with the private companies.

Goodwin would compel all accidents to be reported forthwith to the police and to the state's auto inspectors. "Fake claims would thus be eliminated," he said. "Now, when a couple of cars collide and a mudguard is damaged, the chap at fault says, 'I have no property damage insurance.' The lawyers and doctors get together and they say, 'We'll put in a claim for personal injuries.' By the time the insurance investigators get around, two or three months later, the only evidence procurable is from the 'injured' persons, who have had time to cook up any story they are willing to lend to their imagination."

PLANS QUICK "JUSTICE"

"It takes from three to five years to get an actual damage suit settled in the courts," I reminded Goodwin.

"Yes," he said, "but we will have state claim agents in every district of the state. They will be empowered to settle claims up to $1000. Quick justice will be assured, and the courts will be no longer be clogged. For cases in excess of $1000, the claimants can go to the courts as usual, or to the board of administrators of the state fund, to be named by the governor."

Goodwin was asked how this state system could get along on a rate of $18 per car, as compared to the average rate of $30, now estimated to be levied upon all the cars operating in the state.

PROFITS NOW MILLIONS

"The autoists," he said, "are now paying the private companies about $23,000,000 per year for insurance. Of this amount, perhaps $15,000,000 is paid back to the injured persons, or their heirs, who bring claims out of accidents. This leaves the private companies about $8,000,000 annually.

"The private companies charge about $1,700,000 annually for the cost of 'administration,' a sum in excess of the cost to the state of the entire Department of Motor Vehicles. The sum of $2,700,000 is charged by the companies for 'claims', this, I understand, is solely for the cost of investigating claims. The companies pay their agents $2,500,000 a year for the cost of acquisition; that is the agents get 12 per cent of all premiums as their reward for the service of 'converting' the autoists to the need of insurance when, as a matter of fact, the state compels the autoists to accept insurance whether they want it or not. These are some of the costs that would be entirely or largely eliminated if the state were transacting the business itself."

Mr. Goodwin does not have an abiding confidence that his plan will be adopted by the Legislature. "The private insurance companies don't want this plan," he said, "and I am old enough to know that the insurance companies, through their lobbyists, exert a large influence where that influence is of the most value to themselves."

Registrar Ryan and Bride -:- Feted at Wedding Breakfast

Following the marriage of Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles, to Miss Eileen Marie McGovern, of Dorchester, in St. Mary's Chapel at Boston College today, an elaborate wedding breakfast was served at the Copley-Plaza. Many relatives and intimate friends of the couple were present. The couple later left Boston for an extended honeymoon in Havana.

TROPICAL MOON LURES PAIR IN 80 MINUTES

Ship Officer Woos and Weds Philadelphia Girl for Record

A tropical moon and a handsome ship's chief officer was too much of a combination for even a Philadelphia girl to resist—especially since the handsome officer was from Massachusetts.

And so they were married—Bruce Pitman Burnham, 29, of Topsfield and Marblehead, and Barbara Reed Welland.

Dispatches from New Orleans today revealed that the proposal set an all-time marine record. And that's some record. The time was one hour, 20 minutes, and some odd fifths of seconds.

YOWS HE'LL WED

Burnham, second in command of the coast liner Commercial Traveler, saw his future bride coming up the gangplank.

"Captain, there's the girl I'm going to marry," he declared.

And he did.

The proposal went off in the record time aforementioned. At Tampa, Fla., the next stop, the couple sought out a justice of the peace.

It wasn't so easy. Four times they rang door bells. Four times they failed. But the fifth J. P. doorbell was that of Mrs. Mary C. Caccisore, a feminine J. P. who knew a good old whirlwind romance when she saw one.

MOTHER GIVES BLESSING

The Burnhams got the blessing of Mrs. Jennie Rust, the bridegroom's mother, when they returned to his ship just before 3 a. m., sailing time.

The bride is the daughter of Frank H. Welland of Philadelphia, vice-president of the Shipfitters' Union.

Zero Ahead, Stay to Be Short

Get out the ear-muffs again and put more "silky" in your automobile radiators, for Mr. Cold Wave is paying a return visit to Boston tonight.

When he arrives the red marker on your thermometer will be in the vicinity of the big cipher. However, his stay will be brief, it was said at the weather bureau, and the mercury will start to rise slowly tomorrow.

Humidity today was 42, normal for the day being 71. Boston escaped the extremely cold weather current in Canada, the West and the Northwest. In Quebec it was 48 below and in Northfield, Vt., 20 below.

At 1 a. m. today it was 8 above, dropping to 4 at 8 o'clock. It rose four degrees in the next two hours.

118 P. C. PRICE RISE SEEN BY KEMMERER

Financial Authority Predicts Boost in Living Cost

New York, Feb. 3—Prof. Edwin Walter Kemmerer, noted financial writer, predicted today that the cost of living will be more than double that of last November when the depression is over and the results of the Roosevelt administration's dollar devaluation have completely worked themselves out.

Kemmerer, who is professor of international finance at Princeton university, foresaw a general price level 118 per cent higher. He emphasized that these results would take time.

He also declared that "if present tendencies are long continued, the Federal Reserve system will soon be little more than a fiscal agency of the government."

"Like the first and second United States banks, its tenure of usefulness as a real central bank will have been but twenty years," said Kemmerer.

His comment was made in a lengthy analysis of what he termed the "new monetary unit and new currency system" put into effect by the Roosevelt administration January 31.

A large part of his analysis was devoted to future effects of devaluation of the dollar. He said:

"If we assume the commodity price level of 1926 represents roughly what will be the purchasing power of gold when the world once works its way out of this depression and when our panic-stricken international struggle for gold has subsided, then our commodity price level, when once the adjustments to 'the new 59.06 cents dollar' has been completely effected would be as follows:

"All prices would be about 60 per cent higher than in 1926. Wholesale prices would be 139 per cent higher than for last November; general prices would be 118 per cent higher, and the cost of living would be 128 per cent higher.

"These are the price advances that we may reasonably expect will ultimately take place when the depression is over and when the results of the devaluation have completely worked themselves out."

FRITZI SCHEFF OUT OF JOB

New York, Feb. 3 (AP)—Fritzi Scheff—she once sang for $2000 a week—ended her engagement today as a tap room hostess.

So Fritzi, once of "Mlle. Modiste," is out of a job and a mortgage foreclosure looms ahead.

Minus $2000—what, in her heydey, would have been one week's salary!—will part her from her home in two months, unless something turns up. The court has granted three extensions, and even optimistic Fritzi doesn't hope for another.

"It was fine while it lasted," she said of her tap room engagement. "I earned enough to five. But of course, everything must have an end.

"What will I be doing tomorrow, or two weeks from now? That's more than I can tell. But I'll find something."

HALLIWELL IN LOVE SUIT

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—Walter S. Halliwell, heir to a tobacco fortune, was taking a brief vacation from the courts today—and glad of it.

Halliwell appeared in Harlem court to answer charges of his wife, Mrs. Lillian J. Halliwell, that he was guilty of misconduct with pretty Mrs. Helen Cox Williams, wife of a Baltimore business man.

As he walked out of court, the hearing on the charges postponed until next Friday, he was greeted by a detective who handed him a summons and complaint in a $250,000 alienation of affections suit filed by Eidney A. Williams, Mrs. Williams' spouse.

Williams' suit charged Halliwell and Mrs. Williams kept romantic trysts in Atlantic City, New York and at Halliwell's Connecticut estate. He also accused Halliwell of using "his great wealth and income," estimated at $100,000 a year, to dazzle and mislead Mrs. Williams.

Halliwell and Mrs. Williams were arrested in a Park ave. apartment recently when the former's wife led a surprise raid on the building.

250 See Registrar Ryan Take Dorchester Bride

His former college dean, the Rev. Patrick J. McHugh, S. J., of Boston College, officiated at the wedding ceremony today that joined Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan with Eileen Marie McGovern, of Dorchester.

The ceremony took place in the beautiful St. Mary's Chapel at Boston College, University Heights. Mayor Mansfield and a group of other city, state and county officials distinguished the gathering of 250 witnesses to the wedding.

Miss Anna F. McGovern, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Paul Cifrino, Dorchester merchant, was best man. The bride was given away by her cousin, Joseph V. Gallagher of New York City.

Ushers were: Chairman of the Street Commision Owen A. Gallagher, Street Commr. Frank T. Dolan, Adrian Edwards, Rep. Frank J. MacFarland and Victor de Gerard.

Father McHugh celebrated a nuptial mass before the wedding ceremony. Within the sanctuary sat Rev. Frederic Boehm, S. J., Rev. Daniel Lynch, S. J., both former professors of the bridegroom; Rev. Richard McShane of Salem, Rev. Andrew Corbett of Boston; Rev. J. J. O'Leary, S. T. D., of Malden, and Rev. Fr. O'Leary of Brockton.

Soloists were the Misses Ida McCarthy O'Shea, Martha Hurley and Ethel Selinger.

Breakfast for relatives and close friends followed at the Copley-Plaza hotel. The honeymoon will be in Havana, and the couple will make their home in West Roxbury.

BYRD'S STORES ARE UNLOADED

Bay of Whales, Antarctica, Feb. 3 (AP) (via Mackay Radio)—The second Byrd Antarctic Expedition completed today the first phase of operations to equip the winter party—a trek hindered by crumbling ice and adverse weather conditions.

Deck officers of the flagship reported that the last of the 450 tons of stores and scientific equipment had been unloaded, except for scattered odds and ends and personal gear.

Only the task of transferring 250 tons of coal to the supply ship, the Bear of Oakland, remained. As soon as that is done the flagship will start north for New Zealand, where she will remain a year.

Probe by Secret Service Denied

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—William H. Moran, chief of the Secret Service, today told newspapermen he was "not aware of any such investigation" as that reported by the New York Daily News, which said the Secret Service had been ordered by President Roosevelt to make a wide inquiry into alleged graft by some government officials.

Cooper, RKO Producer, Quits

Hollywood, Feb. 3 (INS)—B. B. Kahane, president of RKO-Radio Pictures, announced today the resignation of Merian C. Cooper as an executive producer.

After six months in Europe Cooper will return to make several special productions for the company, Kahane said.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Visit Prison

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., accompanied by Sanford Bates of the Federal Prison department, left today for the Virginia state penitentiary in Richmond.

60 Arrested in Russian Mutiny

Harbin, Feb. 3 (INS)—Japanese powers here today reported a mutiny had occurred in a large Russian aviation unit at Mukenkai, near Blagoveschensk. Sixty ringleaders were arrested, it was stated.

JOLSON WANTS RUBY TO QUIT

Hollywood, Feb. 3—Al Jolson has offered his wife, Ruby Keeler, $50,000 to abandon her screen career, it became known here today.

Jolson denies that he is attempting to bribe his wife to forget stardom.

"I told Ruby," he said, "that I would give her $50 $1000 bills if she would quit the show business."

Ruby has failed to accept the offer. Her success in "42nd Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933" and "Footlight Parade," has made her one of the most valuable stars in Hollywood.

Jolson's chief objection to Ruby's screen activity is that it interferes with his golf. For years Al has been able to travel where and when he pleased, generally avoiding contracts which would keep him tied long to one place.

In the last few weeks Jolson has changed his mind about screen retirement several times.

4 Guilty in Huge Insurance Plot

Chicago, Feb. 3 (INS)—Four defendants in the hugh life insurance company conspiracy case were found guilty by a jury that deliberated its verdict less than four hours.

Two other defendants were acquitted.

The four found guilty were Macbir J. Dorsey, former head of the Security Life Insurance Co.; Edwin Hull, who handled mortgage deals; C. Edwin Johnson, insurance official, and Harry Hutlig, wealthy Muscatine, Io., manufacturer.

$750,000 PAID ON P. O. SITE

As trustee of the Boston Terminals Co., owner of the land in the rear of the South Station, where the new Boston parcel post building will be erected, the Old Colony Trust Co. has been paid $750,000 for the site, it was revealed in Federal Court today.

Compensation for the property, which was paid into the court with the declaration of the taking, is $1,050,000 and $300,000 is yet to be paid out.

'Other Wife' Gets Bequest of 'Wife'

Philadelphia, Feb. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Jeanette Patterson Wallace, of Philadelphia, is to get the $1,200 yearly income bequeathed to her by her late husband's "other wife," Mrs. Etta Mellier, of New Haven, Conn.

Both women were married more than 20 years to the same man. One knew him as Harold D. Wallace; the other, as A. A. Mellier. Not until his death did they learn of each other's existence and then they became close friends.

FORD SHARES IN U. S. CONTRACT

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS)—The Ford Motor Company today shared in award of contracts for 482 trucks and 60 passenger cars for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The award was divided by the Interior Department. The Chevrolet Motor Co. of Detroit, Mich., received a contract for 326 trucks at $187,942.40, and the Northwest Motor Co., a Ford concern, got contracts for 156 trucks and 55 passenger cars at $108,749.70.

Miss Davies Bares 16,000 Aided by Relief Fund

Los Angeles, Feb. 3 (US)—Headed by Miss Marion Davies, famous star, the motion picture relief fund spent $150,000 last year in relieving distress caused by film folk by illness and unemployment, it was disclosed today in a report made by Miss Davies as president of the fund.

Representing approximately 16,000 persons, 4800 cases received aid.

Other facts concerning the fund, significant of the broad humanitarian purposes accomplished through it, include:

Fifteen thousand people provided with $60,000 worth of food.

Hundreds of families saved from eviction from their homes and $10,000 paid for rents and public utilities.

More than 1000 persons provided with private medical care; 300 treated in sanitariums, hospitals and rest homes.

Special nurses provided in 150 cases.

By MISS MARION DAVIES

One hundred major operations performed.

Six thousand office interviews and 1500 home visits by social workers of the fund.

One thousand turkey baskets and 600 Christmas dinner tickets distributed during the Christmas holidays.

Supported entirely by members of the motion picture profession, the fund is a private charitable organization. Most members pledge one half of one per cent of their earnings, but in many cases highly paid artists contribute sums far in excess of that percentage.

The officers of the fund are: Marion Davies, president; Fred W. Beetson, chairman of the executive committee; Ronald Colman, first vice-president; Mary Pickford, second vice president; Will H. Hays, third vice-president; Samuel Goldwyn, fourth vice-president; M. C. Levee, treasurer and Francis X. Baur, executive secretary.

SANKEY ARREST IRKS CHICAGO POLICE

Jack Lait, Chicago crime reporter and nationally known dramatist, novelist and short story writer, relates today for Universal Service another chapter in the round-up of the last of the Boettcher kidnapers, Verne Sankey and Gordon Alcorn.

By JACK LAIT
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Chicago, Feb. 3—The Chicago police are burning up over the way the federal Department of Justice agents "stole the play" on the arrests of both Verne Sankey and Gordon Alcorn, his confessed accomplice in the Denver Boettcher "snatch."

The residue of the reward for the apprehension of both men is now so clouded and involved that there is little chance that any of the local police will get a share of the $9000 for the arrest of Sankey, and it looks hopeless for them as to their chances for any part of the $6000 for nabbing Alcorn.

DENVER GAVE CLUE

The original tip which led to the trapping of Sankey in a North Side barber shop, I learn authoritatively, came from Denver Department of Justice agents.

Sankey was known as a dangerous man, and Purvis drafted a squad of Chicago police to help him close in on Sankey. The statement of the important arrest, given out originally in Washington, gave the Chicago police no mention, even, merely stating that agents of the United States bureau of investigation found Sankey, ambushed him and took him in.

But the Alcorn pinch was, as the Chicago police view it, even rawer. Purvis, on a left-handed hunch dropped by Sankey's woman, sent his men to trail the purchase of a cheap second-hand car last spring, and with some sharp detective work and some swell luck, the trail to Alcorn was quickly and easily found.

ALCORN EASY PINCH

Alcorn was never considered a desperado. So, in this job, the local constabulary wasn't consulted at all or even let in on the secret. Ten "feds" swooped in on Alcorn. The kidnaper's wife merely opened the back door of the shabby flat on a knock. Alcorn rose from bed in an inner room unarmed and with his hands up. Under a chair-cushion was found a .25 caliber revolver, which one of the Chicago detectives sneeringly referred to as a "pea-shooter" when discussing the case with me.

Alcorn will be whisked to South Dakota to "take the rap" with Sankey and Sankey's wife. Mrs. Sankey had made arrangements to rush to Chicago when she was arrested and her bail has raised from $5000 to $50,000 to keep her from leaving the jurisdiction.

The ex-chambermaid arrested with Sankey is being held here incommunicado for disposition at orders of Purvis. She will probably be released since her testimony against Sankey is not regarded as important.

The Eastern government agents, specialists on the Lindbergh baby case, have been recalled, and all efforts to hook Sankey up with that atrocity has been abandoned.

'Chickie's Daughter' Coming

ELENORE MEHERIN

Elenore Meherin is authoress of "Chickie's Daughter," the new thrilling serial that begins in next Wednesday's issue of the Boston Evening American. "I always knew there was a story in Chickie's daughter," said the authoress, explaining her new novel. "She was eager for an exciting and beautiful life. What torments must gnaw Chickie's heart when she sees her daughter re-live her own childhood." Don't miss the romance that unfolds for Chickie's daughter.

"Chickie" Sees Daughter Flame in New Serial

This is Chickie's daughter—a product of this latest generation, as Chickie was a product of hers, and a girl whose thrilling story, beginning in next Wednesday's Boston Evening American, will be told by the same author, Elenore Meherin.

"I knew always there was a story in Chickie's daughter," the author said in announcing this new work, "a true, moving drama. You could see it in the girl's beautiful face with its young, passionate mouth and eyes of a burning blue.

"I knew, too, that Chickie's story was but half-told. This girl must chalk the last of it in triumph or defeat.

"So I've written the story of Chickie's daughter. The girl is like Chickie when the first dream of love was in her heart.

"When Chickie sees the girl, eager, wildly impatient for this beautiful, exciting life; when she sees her with a misty, far away look in her eyes and knows that she thinks and hungers already for the Man of her Dreams; when Chickie re-lives like this her own girlhood, what torments gnaw at her heart!"

You'll learn in the story beginning next Wednesday—Chickie's Daughter!

$35,000,000 IN GOLD SHIPPED TO AMERICA

Southampton, Eng., Feb. 3—The trans-Atlantic gold rush is the wake of American dollar devaluation was on today.

The liners Bremen and Berengaria sailed with strongrooms stacked with bars of an estimated value of more than $30,000,000. A total weight of 33½ tons of gold.

The Berengaria carried about $20,000,000 worth and picked up another $5,000,000 worth at Cherbourg, while the Bremen had $7,500,00 worth from here and $2,000,000 from Cherbourg.

The precious cargoes consisted of bars weighing 60 pounds each packed two to a box and each box worth roughly $50,000.

The liner Washington is at sea, with $5,000,000 worth of gold for New York.

In London today the dollar opened at $4.89 to the pound and later declined to $4.93.

The European gold bloc currencies rebounded vigorously against the dollar as stabilization operations came to their aid in providing the necessary dollar exchange.

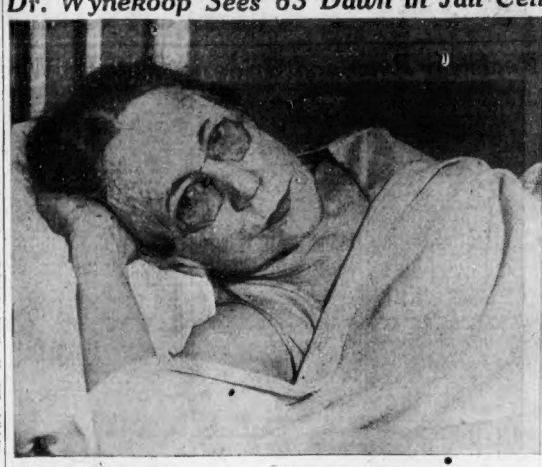
Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—The jump this week in the Treasury listing of the dollar value of its gold was from $4,034,887,780.67 to $7,018,263,925.70—due to the recent devaluation.

The profit on the gold was paid into the general fund of the Treasury and put its cash balance at a record figure of $4,434,715,155.18.

At this rate the profit on the gold by President Roosevelt's devaluation order approached $3,000,000,000, and may reach this figure as more hoarded gold trickles back to the banks.

The Treasury today announced the new dollar value of its gold supply at $7,018,263,925.70.

Dr. Wynekoop Sees 63 Dawn in Jail Cell



Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop lay in bed in her cell at the Chicago County jail and observed her 63d birthday anniversary. She is charged with the clinic murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, and doubts—as do her physicians—if she ever lives to hear a jury pronounce her fate. (International News photo.)

JOB INSURANCE AIM OF REDS

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Approximately 600 persons arrived in the capital today in automobiles and trucks to petition Congress for unemployment insurance legislation.

The gathering was directed by the Workers organization which conducted two "hunger marches" during the Hoover administration.

Benjamin Legler, leader of the "National Unemployed Council," said Congress would be asked to enact a bill for insurance covering unemployment, old age, accident, illness and maternity.

This, he said, could be financed by surtaxes on incomes of more than $5000 a year.

SENATORS PUSH AID FOR VETS

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS)—A charge that Uncle Sam is the chief violator of the NRA was raised today as a militant bipartisan group battled up Senate adoption of the American Legion's four point program for liberalizing benefits to war veterans.

Leaders of the drive—Senators Steiwer (R.) of Oregon, and McCarran (D.) of Nevada—met with a Senate appropriations subcommittee to draft appropriate amendments for inserting the program in the independent offices appropriation bill. This was done at the direction of the full committee, which previously voted 12 to 10 that such amendments were in order on this appropriation bill.

"The government itself is the chief offender against the NRA," said Steiwer. "It reduces salaries and lengthens hours of labor, while compelling private businesses to increase salaries and shorten hours of labor. I can see no justice or equity in such a course."

Saito Sees U. S. as Jap Friend

London, Feb. 3 (AP)—Hiroshi Saito, who at 47 has been rewarded with one of the two most important assignments in the Japanese diplomatic service—the Ambassadorship at Washington—left for his new post today firmly convinced that nothing stands in the way of bringing about the most friendly basis of understanding between the two countries.

"There is no real outstanding difficulty between the United States and Japan," the new Ambassador said as he walked through Waterloo station to entrain for Southampton to embark on the Berengaria.

JILTED DRIVER IS JAILED

Jilted by the girl he intended to marry, Walter Crosby, 21, of Balch st., Beverly, sought liquid solace and became involved in a police chase, which ended when his machine went off Beverly bridge into the harbor there early today.

Patrolmen Joseph E. McDonough and James R. O'Neill, of the Salem police, who were chasing his car, arrived at the bridge and found the machine had struck the bridge abutment.

The officers extricated Crosby and brought him to Salem Hospital to be treated for minor injuries. He was then taken to police headquarters and booked on charges of drunkenness and operating under the influence of liquor.

At police headquarters he told police he was going to marry next week and yesterday had been informed by his intended bride that the whole thing was over. She gave their youth and economic conditions as her reason, he said.

He told police that his plans were in vain and that he decided he would seek solace in the well known cup.

prosperity will be just ahead, and not an iceberg.

An able Canadian newspaper, The Toronto Mail and Empire, lets several interesting cats and kittens out of the bag in connection with the building of the St. Lawrence waterway. Many Americans will be interested in these facts mentioned by the Canadian newspaper:

"The cost of the undertaking will be borne mainly by the United States.

"The United States abandons its ancient contention that Lake Michigan is an American lake.

"The treaty puts an end to Chicago's ambition to drain the Great Lakes, for the benefit of the Mississippi valley.

"Lake Michigan belongs to the watershed of the St. Lawrence instead of to the Mississippi watershed.

"No feature of the treaty is more surprising than the low cost to Canada at which the undertaking is to be carried out."

Americans will be especially interested in this statement:

"Canada is to obtain four million horsepower and the United States one million horsepower out of the whole St. Lawrence waterway development."

The Canadian minister to Washington is congratulated by the Canadian newspaper because "HE HAS OBTAINED A TREATY WHICH PLACES THE BULK OF THE COST UPON THE UNITED STATES," in addition to all the other advantages.

Somebody seems to have been asleep on our side of the border when that treaty was made, if facts are as stated by the CANADIAN newspaper.

The United States Senate will have a chance to say what it thinks about this, although, just now, it is not good form for the United States Senate to think, much less say what it thinks, if anything.

It would be a good idea, perhaps, to say to our good Canadian friends:

"Many thanks, we shall not trouble you. We shall build a canal from the Great Lakes to the ocean all the way through American territory, bear ALL the expense, and keep ALL of the power developed."

Can you imagine our British friends making with any other nation such a treaty as the United States is alleged to have made with them?

England and the United States in a money war, each country wants its money to be "cheaper" than the other's money. Officially knocking more than forty cents off the dollar's value, we expect the dollar to drop far below the pound. England fights to keep the pound relatively cheaper than the dollar. That is one of the few underlying facts about money. Outside countries will buy goods from the nation that has the cheapest money, all things being equal.

Some citizens are hurriedly changing dollars into bonds. After the news about more expensive gold and cheaper dollars came out, the Stock Exchange had the biggest bonds sale day, with one exception, in history.

The rush for bonds is not easily understood, since they are payable, principal and interest, in cheaper dollars. Why not have the dollars robbery and implicated Harry Voller, said to be a Chicago Public Enemy, and who was with Miss West in the auto at the time of the robbery.

Miss West had been riding with Voller and another person. As her other guest departed into the lobby of an apartment house, two men walked up to the auto. One demanded her jewels and her money and ar he attempted to wrench her bracelet from her wrist she slapped him, she told police. They took the jewels and money and fled.

Friedman, who was convicted of second degree robbery, faces a sentence of not less than one nor more than five years, Judge Harry Sewell said he would pronounce sentence Tuesday.

At the same time Judge Sewell issued a warrant for the arrest of William J. Clark, Friedman's lawyer, who had been found in contempt during the course of the trial for remarks concerning rulings of the judge. Clark had been ordered to pay a $200 fine or serve 100 days in jail.

Mae West was not in court when the jury returned its verdict.

District attorney's investigators reported the actress with the "come hither" eyes was "at home asleep."

"There's no need to wake her up now; she's tired," they stated.

JEWS TO WAR ON SLANDER

Cincinnati, Feb. 3 (AP)—Adoption of a $280,000 budget for American Jewish activities in 1934, including "a vast program of anti-defamation activities" was announced by the executive committee of Bnai Brith here today.

Urging extension of the organization's work in South America, Dr. E. M. Rubinow, secretary, in his annual report said: "The developments in Germany again raise the issue of migration into new lands, and South America, in the opinion of many, may be the objective of future migratory currents within European Jewry."

Last of 1932 Jap Killers Sentenced

Tokio, Feb. 3 (AP)—The last participants in a terroristic attempt in 1932 to overthrow the civilian government of Japan were sentenced today to prison terms ranging from three and one-half years to life.

The terroristic campaign was climaxed by the assassination of Premier Inukai, May 16, 1932. The de-

SWITZ TRIES TO END OWN LIFE

Paris, Feb. 3 (INS)—Robert Gordon Switz, former aviator of East Orange, N. J., held here in connection with an alleged international spy ring, has attempted to commit suicide twice within the past week, it was learned today.

Switz's attempts became known when he was arraigned before Magistrate Banon for his third examination.

Switz and his wife, a Vassar College graduate, were arrested with a group of others in a series of raids by the Paris police more than six weeks ago. They have been in jail ever since.

BANDITS SIND 2, STEAL FURS

A masked trio of bandits invaded downtown Boston today, bound the manager of a fur store and his assistant and made a getaway with $190 and a quantity of furs, the value of which is as yet undetermined.

The holdup took place at the Edwin F. Jordan fur store in Hayward pl. The bandits cut the telephone wires before they held up their victims, and this came near causing their undoing.

Cutting of the wires, registered at the telephone exchange, caused an alarm. When police arrived they found Jordan and his manager, Freeman S. Wright, securely bound and leaning against a wall. A messenger boy employed in the building, was forced to lie on the floor while the bandits hurried to their waiting machine.

ance was obtained on Jan. 22 last by Benjamin Hartstein, counsel to Fay, while Hyman Bushel, counsel to Rudy, was before Supreme Court Justice McGeehan prepared to argue for an injunction permanently restraining Fay from continuing her California suit under which she seeks $7500 a month in alimony.

"Had I been advised of these important facts," said Justice Lydon in his vacating order today, "and the circumstances connected with them, the order of discontinuance would not have been granted.

"At the time the said order was signed, counsel for the plaintiff (Fay) stated that the plaintiff desired to discontinue the action on the payment of costs and that there was no counter claim interposed by the defendant (Rudy) in his answer.

SUIT "ON AGAIN"

"But counsel failed to inform me that a similar action brought by this plaintiff was pending in California and also failed to mention that a motion in this action was about to be heard on that day in special term, Part 1, of this court, in which defendant was asking leave to serve an amended answer collecting and defense and counter claim and seeking injunctive relief to restrain permanently the prosecution of the California proceedings."

In Fay's local suit which Justice Lydon put "on again" by today's order, she seeks to break the separation agreement under which Rudy is paying her $100 a week.

Her California action, subsequently filed, asks a separation, $7500 monthly alimony, $50,000 counsel fees and $10,000 court costs.

YOUNG MOOSE DIES AT SHOW

Jennie died today at the tender age of seven months.

As they removed her body her mother, Jane, snorted a protest and her big eyes followed the silent form as it was borne out of Mechanics' Building. She shed no tears, but her grief was evident.

Jennie was a moose calf, brought here as part of the New Brunswick, Canada, government exhibit at the Sportsmen's Show, which opened today. She was found dead at 5:45 a. m. in the cage.

D. Leo Dolan, director of information and tourists for the province, had the carcass taken to the Animal Rescue League where an autopsy was performed by Dr. W. A. Young. He reported Jennie had died of hemorrhages of the lungs.

In addition to the moose, the exhibit includes four bears, two deer, one beaver, two minks and two wildcats, in addition to smaller game, and is said to be the largest at the show.

JOB INSURANCE BILL IS READY FOR CONGRESS

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Bearing what appeared to be an administration label, a bill looking toward job insurance in every State today was ready for introduction in Congress.

Drawn by Senator Wagner (D.-N. Y.), in co-operation with Secretary Perkins, the measure would set up a Federal fax upon all employers. Each would receive exemptions for contributions to approved State unemployment insurance systems.

The labor secretary, after a call with Wagner at the White House, said she was not authorized to announce that Mr. Roosevelt would place the administration behind the bill to push it through Congress, but added that he was "profoundly interested."

Miss Perkins expressed the opinion that most past unemployment insurance methods have smacked of the "free dole and old fashioned handout." What is needed, she described as:

"A technique for providing income for people who are laid off because of the great elemental changes that are bound to take place in industry."

2 Tots Set Fires to See Engines Go

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—An 11-year-old boy and an eight-year-old girl who admitted setting fire to two Brooklyn churches because they "liked to see the flames and the engines go," were held arraigned today in children's court as juvenile delinquents.

The children, William Grinnell, and his sister, Alice, admitted, police said, setting fire to the church of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, where $10,000 damage was done before the flames were subdued, and the Church of St. Benedict where loss was slight.

Thomas' Son Weds in Old War Church

New York, Feb. 3 (AP) — A church that served as a barracks for British soldiers in the Revolutionary War was the scene today of a brilliant wedding.

William Stewart Thomas, the son of Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President of the United States in 1932, and Mary Gabrielle Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Allen Campbell of East Norwich chose the old First Church at Huntington, L. I., for their wedding.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years has treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a mixture of vegetable and mineral made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, helping to normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

At 91, He Still Does Dishes; Happily Wed 70 Years

Yarmouth, Feb. 3 (AP)—Two pink-cheeked, white-haired Cape Cod'ders—he 91 and she 90—observed today their 70th wedding anniversary. They are Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Kelley, who were married a year before the Civil War ended.

They don't point out any special virtues which have brought them health and happiness, other than:

"We have worked pretty hard. We have had our ups and downs, but we have enjoyed life, and find contentment now in quiet living."

Kelley shipped before the mast as a lad of 14, and spent his 15th birthday in Calcutta.

Retiring to land, he became a house painter and up until five years ago followed that business.

They have three children, Miss Annette and Alfred F. of Yarmouthport and Frank Kelley of Falmouth. They also have four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Kelly was a steady smoker for a dozen years then, "One Sunday I knocked off, and never smoked again, and that was 55 years ago. I have probably saved thousands of dollars."

Kelley does the dishes nd perhaps that's why they get along so well.

EVERETT CHAIN STORE HELD UP

Whistling as they entered a chain store at Elm st. and Springvale ave., Everett, early today, two youths asked for cigarettes, but they produced revolvers instead of the price of the smokes.

"Give us all your dough," commanded one.

"I just opened the store and I have none," replied John Doherty, the manager.

The bandits, who were each about 18, exhibited their disbelief by marching down into the cellar and escaping with $160 in currency and checks.

2 WOMEN SAVED FROM FUMES

Fast work and quick thinking by firemen and a doctor saved the lives of two Ziegler st., Roxbury, sisters today, as they were slowly dying from inhalation of carbon monoxide fumes from a heater.

Miss Nellie Stern, 22, was carried from home by her mother and collapsed in front of the Ladder 4 firehouse, a block away.

Firemen put her under an inhalator, worked desperately to save the girl, and called Dr. Joseph Lawson of Muproe st., Roxbury.

When they revived the girl, firemen rushed to the house to see if anyone else had been imperilled. They found Mildred, 18, unconscious. She was revived by the same treatment.

Porazzo Jurors Disagree in Revere Club Slaying

After deliberating for more than 15 hours, a jury in the court of Judge John M. Gibbs this morning found Nicholas Porazzo, an inmate of Concord Reformatory, not guilty of assault with a deadly weapon on Walter F. Shea and disagreed on the charge of murdering Michael Richardi.

The latter was slain in his Revere night club early New Year's day, 1933. George Brogna, indicted with Porazzo for the murder, was "wiped out" by gangland before he could be brought to trial.

JURY 10 TO 2, REPORT

Following the report of the jurors to Judge Gibbs, who spent the night in his chambers awaiting the verdict, Joseph P. Walsh, defense council told the court:

"I understand that the jurors stood 10 to 2 for acquittal."

"That isn't so," interrupted Deputy Sheriff Eugene Lakemarsten.

Judge Gibbs did not comment, but instructed the jurors to be "reluctant" to talk with anyone about their deliberations in view of the fact that Porazzo will be tried again on the murder charge, within a month.

It was learned today that one of the jurors, Paul Wilson of 230 Huntington ave., listed on the jury roll as a clerk, is a Christian Science practitioner and that he takes regular visits to the State Prison at Charlestown to expound the doctrines of his religion to receptive inmates.

DID NOT TAKE STAND

Porazzo, during the trial has been brought to court daily from Concord, where he is serving the last half of an eight year sentence for robbery. He was on parole at the time of the Richardi slaying, was stabbed later and sent back to the reformatory upon recovering.

The jury was ignorant of this fact, for Porazzo did not take the stand in his own defense and therefore it could not be brought out in cross-examination by Asset.-Dist.-Atty Daniel J. Gillen.

LOST AIRMAIL PAPERS ARE RETURNED

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS)—Parts of the missing papers taken from the offices of former assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken who is now under arrest on charges tantamount to contempt, of the Senate, were recovered today by the Black investigating committee.

Th papers were delivered to the committee by Gilbert Givens, who admitted that he played a game of hide-and-seek in order to spirit them out of MacCracken's offices.

Givens is secretary to Harris M. Hanshue, president of Transcontinental and Western Airways.

A few moments previously, Col. L. H. Brittin, president of Northwest Airway, Inc., had admitted removal and destruction of "personal" files in MacCracken's office, dealing with air mail negotiations in which his company was involved and which were under Senate subpoena.

Givens admitted MacCracken helped him sort out the "confidential" information relating to Hanshue's company.

Under questioning, Givens said that on Thursday he sent a large number of papers to a "Mr. Vorhees," traveling auditor of the company, at a New York hotel.

The papers were returned last night by Vorhees to Givens but they were not in the original containers.

Brittin's summons to appear before the committee added a new chapter to a swiftly moving drama involving prominent figures of the Hoover administration in air mail scandals that have created a nation-wide sensation.

While Brittin was being grilled by committee members, MacCracken was under arrest, and facing appearance Monday before the bar of the Senate on contempt charges.

Committee investigators and Department of Justice agents delved through the files in MacCracken's office.

HITCHCOCK, OF NEBRASKA, DIES

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Omaha, publisher who represented Nebraska nearly 20 years in the United States Senate and House, died today from heart disease in his new home here. He was 74.

As publisher of the Omaha World-Herald he was known throughout the country and he was an international figure from the days of his unsuccessful fight for ratification of the Versailles treaty as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the Wilson administration.

Hitchcock was in the Senate until 1923, serving two terms there after being thrice elected to the House.

Mrs. Hitchcock was at the bedside when the publisher died. Also present were Mrs. Henry Doorly, his daughter; Gilbert Doorly, Mrs. Richard Young, a grandchild, and Mrs. Edmund Kauntze, sister of Mrs. Hitchcock.

CWA BILL WINS APPROVAL

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—The Administration bill to appropriate 950 million dollars for unemployment relief and the Civil Works Administration during the remainder of the current fiscal year was approved today by the Senate appropriations committee.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator and CWA director, told the committee that about 400 million dollars would be required to carry the Civil Works activities up to May 1, and the remainder would be used for unemployment relief grants to the states.

He reiterated the administration plans to gradually cut down the CWA program and abandon it by May 1.

40 Tech Balloons to Search Skies for Weather Data

The weather research airplane of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which for nearly two years has made daily flights over Boston for meteorological observations, left the Boston Airport today, for St. Louis. On his arrival at Lambert Field Airport, Lieut. Henry B. Harris, research pilot of the ship, will prepare for high altitude flights over Missouri in connection with Technology's study of stratosphere weather conditions by means of sounding balloons.

In this study 40 balloons, about four feet in diameter when inflated, will be released at intervals of two hours from Lambert Field airport. Each balloon will carry specially designed instruments weighing only a few ounces for automatically recording temperature, humidity and atmospheric pressure.

Prof. Carl G. Rossby, director fo the division of meteorology at Technology, and Louis Harmantas, research associate, left for St. Louis yesterday afternoon with the specially designed meteorographs, one of which will be attached to each balloon. The study will begin as soon as weather conditions are favorable.

In Arkansas

Mrs. Anne Cannon Smith, who is reported in Arkansas to seek a divorce from F. B. Smith, Jr., of Charlotte. She is the former wife of the late Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir.

SMITH'S EX TO ASK DIVORCE

Concord, N. C., Feb. 3 (AP)—The Concord Daily Tribune today says that Mrs. Anne Cannon Smith of Charlotte, former wife of the late Smith Reynolds, will establish residence at Hot Springs, Ark., to institute divorce proceedings against her present husband, F. Brandon Smith, Jr., of Charlotte.

The paper says Mrs. Smith left Concord yesterday for Arkansas. Arkansas law permits a final degree after 90 days residence in that state. The Tribune said it could not learn the grounds on which the divorce would be sought.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married at the summer home of her parents at Bowling Rock, on May 4, 1932, a few months after she was granted a divorce at Reno, Nev., from Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir, who was mysteriously and fatally wounded at his palatial family home at Winston-Salem the same year.

BONDS FREE 5 IN DEB THEFT

Reading, Ct., Feb. 3 (INS)—Five young society girls, including one from Springfield, Mass., were free today under $500 bonds each, awaiting trial at the March terms of criminal superior court on charges of breaking and entering the home here of Miss Cornelia Talmadge, wealthy New York society matron, a week ago.

The girls told police they had entered the home on a dare and taken various articles as part of a prank.

The young women are Helen Palmer of Springfield, Mildred Walsh of Westport, Helen Kardis and Katherine Burns, both of Darien, and Gertrude Chamberland of Springfield, Mass.

Werrenraths Reaffirm Marriage Vows

Complete Wedding Is Held on Sixth Anniversary

Ceremony More Solemn Than Our First, Declares Wife

Chicago, Feb. 3 (AP)—Reinald Werrenrath of New York, famous baritone, and his attractive brunette wife, the former Verna True Neidig of Mount Vernon, Ia., resumed the happy tempo of their married life today after a "reaffirmation of marriage" at which they repledged their vows during a solemn religious ceremony.

It was the noted singer's sixth anniversary present to his wife last night and came as a surprise to the "bride." It was a complete wedding even to the bridal veil.

The Werrenraths had been married in a civil service in Weehawken, N. J., and the second ceremony was a religious event—always desired by Mrs. Werrenrath, who is in her early thirties. The baritone is 50.

"This marriage," said Mrs. Werrenrath, "was so much more solemn than the first, for after six years of adjusting one's life to another's person's, one realizes the seriousness and meaning of saying 'I do.'

"Besides the beauty, the sanctity of a religious ceremony, to retake—and to realize that one is happy to retake—the marriage vows after six years of matrimony—Oh, how much stronger, finer that makes one's marriage."

Werrenrath in discussing his plans for the marriage had spoken of it as an event commemorating "one of the happiest days of my life."

The ceremony was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brayton Witherell in suburban Winnetka, in the presence of six friends. The Rev. Gardiner MacWhorter, Episcopalian clergyman, officiated.

But there was an undercurrent of sorrow due to the serious illness of Arthur James Witherell, 82, the father of the host, who had looked forward to giving the bride away.

H. K. Farrar officiated in his stead. Brayton Witherell was best man and Mrs. Witherell, matron of honor.

"My impromptu wedding gown," laughed Mrs. Werrenrath, as she posed for pictures.

She had been urged by her husband to bring a certain "white beaded evening gown," and said she learned why only after she arrived from the East yesterday.

2 WEEKS GIVEN EX-OFFICER

Former Patrolman John J. Dowd of Station 11, went to the house of correction today to serve a two week's sentence imposed by Judge Charles L. Carr in Municipal court for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

A six months sentence for operating without authority and three months sentence for leaving the scene of an accident, were suspended. Dowd pleaded guilty yesterday.

On New Year's Day, Dowd boarded a New England Telephone Co. truck in front of the Mechanics' Building and drove it down Huntington ave. until it crashed to another car. He was discharged from the force the next day by Commr. Hultman.

Real Winter Grade AMERICAN GAS

vaporizes quickly · · · sustains acceleration

HERE'S a different and real winter grade of regular gas that really licks your winter starting troubles.

Real winter grade Orange American Gas vaporizes quickly. That means it breaks down instantly into a spray, which fires the second your starter makes the plugs spark.

It will do that and start quickly even when the thermometer is at Zero or 'way below. That done, this same steady vaporizing keeps your motor running smoothly without stalling. Engineers call that "sustained acceleration".

You'll want to try this real winter grade Orange American Gas, because it will give you better winter performance than any other gasoline selling at regular gas price.

HOT ... From HOLLYWOOD

By GWYNN
Special to Boston Evening American.

Hollywood, Feb. 3—Even though we don't envy the scenario writers' job on the story, Paramount's intention of filming "The Diary of a Princess," authorized by the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, should result in a very colorful and entertaining picture when it emerges on celluloid.

We hear that Sylvia Sidney is destined to star in this story when it is brought to the screen, and that it will be called "The Life of a Princess." What's more, the studio is bringing the Grand Duchess herself to Hollywood, where it is claimed she will be technical adviser on the film during its making. We have a sneaking suspicion that the Grand Duchess will be letting herself (AND the picture) in for a great amount of publicity when this occurs—and that Paramount is fully aware of this—and, therefore, right smart to offer the lady a studio job, e • •

Sheik Horse Acts

Jadaan, the beautiful Arabian horse which Rudolph Valentino rode through "The Sheik" and many of his later successes, is making a screen "comeback." The steed, which attained no small measure of fame along with his master, has been well taken care of for the past few years, and will now be mounted by Richard Dix, who rides him in "Stingaree," Irene Dunne and Mary Boland have lending parts in this picture, which will be directed by William Wellman, for Radio.

Lou Holtz called up the owner of the Vendome Restaurant in Hollywood the other night and ordered a thousand bottles of champagne! Naturally the restaurateur was flabbergasted—but got wise to the gag when Holtz "explained" that he wanted the wine sent to the Old Soldiers' Home so that each inmate could drink the actor's health the next day—which was his birthday! And the next evening Holtz was leaving a theater with a friend when a girl dashed up to him and asked for his autograph. Holtz, whose pan has not yet appeared on any screen, was surprised, and asked his pal:

"How do you suppose she knew me?"

"Maybe she saw your test!" was the answer.

Roles for Sari

Sari Maritza, who returned to Hollywood from the East a couple of weeks ago, may be off again any minute. Her manager, Vivian Gaye (who is engaged to Randolph Scott—and plenty attractive she is, at!), has been signed by the Sunhaven Studios in Florida for Sari's services for two pictures in which they want to give The Maritza top billing. Incidentally, Vivian Gaye, who went East recently to meet Randy Scott's parents, did very well for herself while in New York. Her specialty is handling writers and their yarns, peddling both men and manuscripts to the various studios, and during her latest trip she signed up Theodore Dreiser, famous novelist, as her own particular client so far as the picturization of his famous stories is concerned. It was a neat trick, too, for Dreiser has steadfastly refused to have an agent handle his work.

Warners are now making plans for a picture which is aimed to star a player from another studio and one, so far, they are just hoping to borrow! The picture is "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," and they have registered a bid with Paramount to lend them Charlie Ruggles for the top spot in the film! The story is by Delmar Daves and a screen treatment is being written with Ruggles in mind!

Tennis Draws 'Em

Everybody in town turned out for the big tennis matches at the Olympic Auditorium last night. Among those who saw Vines beat Tilden were Constance Bennett with Gilbert Roland, Carole Lombard with Bill Powell and Ronald Colman, the Dick Barthelmesses, Kay Francis with Count Cargegna, Eddie Millman, Virginia Peine (who has been going places with Ronald Colman, by the way), the Clive Brooks, Gloria Swanson, and great gobs of other celebs.

Random Shots: Ginger Rogers now says her career comes first—and that there will be no marriage with Lew Ayres . . . Stephen Ames (Adrienne's ex) is in town with Raquel Torres beside him every place he goes . . . David Manners, ill in New York, won't be back in Hollywood for a week or so . . . Laura La Plante will divorce William Seiter when she gets to Europe—a Paris parting of the ways . . . Warners won't permit Joan Blondell to take her husband's name of Barnes for screen use as she wished to . . . Enrico Caruso, Jr., bobbing around on crutches after tripping over a light cable . . . Maxine Doyle, ex-sweetheart of Dick Powell, has just been signed up at Warners and the two are romancing all over again . . . The Paramount studio gave a party last night for Earl Carroll and his bunch of stage cuties . . . Lupe Velez told us yesterday that Johnny Weissmuller never moved so much as a collar out of the house—and he's still there! . . . Mrs. Herbert Marshall (Gilbert will really go through with the divorce proceedings this time—she is still at her ranch) . . . Lois Wilson and Don Alvardo, stepping out at the Beverly Wilshire . . . Arthur Hurley will produce "Pursuit of Happiness," the B'way stage hit, as his first for Paramount . . . Erle O'Brien Moore, who objects to being told she looks like Fay Wray, but who really should be very flattered to hear it, is being tested for pictures at Warners.

After Gary Cooper

Producer Charles R. Rogers is trying to persuade Paramount that he should have Gary Cooper for the starring role in his tropical story called "Green Gold," which Harry Joe Brown (husband of Sally Eilers) will direct. Gary will return to Paramount when he finishes playing opposite Marion Davies in "Operator 13" at MGM —and Rogers says he'll have him for his picture at that time.

Universal yesterday borrowed Patricia Ellis from Warner's and will give her the feminine lead opposite Lew Ayres in "If I Was Rich," which goes into production there this week. The story is by William Anthony McGuire and will be directed by Edward Ludwig.

Guy Kibbe gets his first dramatic role in "Without Honor" at Warner's, after playing comedy characters since the studio first years. Joan Blondell and James Cagney have the leads in the picture.

FASHIONS OF '34 AT MET -:- OPERA TO HOLD SPOTLIGHT

Featured in Mystery Play

Bramwell Fletcher and Daphne Warren Wilson in a scene from "Ten Minute Alibi," which opens its second week at the Plymouth, Monday.

Lionel Barrymore and Cast Excel in State's Film .

An unusually good cast adorns the screen currently, at Loew's State. The photoplay is "This Side of Heaven," and by the acting of Lionel Barrymore and sterling folk beside him, the new picture takes on realism as the story of an average American home. The direction of William K. Howard is another stellar point.

It must be admitted that the dramatic framework is frail, but such is the art of performer and such the skill of director that the whole piece not only holds together but stirs a great deal of interest. It is unfortunate that the writers attempted to overdraw on characterization, and this accounts for the slow pace now and then. But in the main the narrative, while by no means a great play, runs along in entertaining fashion.

That this is so is the result of the work of Barrymore, of Onslow Stevens, Henry Wadsworth, Eddie Nugent, C. Henry Gordon, Dickie Moore and many minor players.

The story deals with the shadow of imprisonment that hangs over Barrymore, who has been innocently involved in an embezzlement in his firm, with the consequences of his children and the high hopes of his wife for becoming a successful novelist pile themselves one upon the other and reach their climaxes simultaneously.

Fay Bainter, stage actress, makes her screen debut in this film, playing the role of Barrymore's wife.

Lew Leslie Is Label for Big Stage Show

By HARRIS MORGAN

For screen fun and lavish spectacle, "Fashions of 1934" proves one of the major box office attractions of the season at the Met. For all the variety of entertainment that goes into a tiptop Negro revue, Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds of 1934" packs the punch. As a combination, the two features, plus the Sevitzky Orchestra, give the theater its finest all-round bill in many a week.

The movie is (surprisingly) given enough story to make it stand on its own as good cinema without counting the extravaganzas and beauty in the Busby Berkeley sequences glorifying the ostrich feather, along with multitudinous feminine lines. The cast to enact the comedy into which the spectacular portions are set, is nicely balanced. William Powell is present as a births promoter; there is Hugh Herbert as the owner of an ostrich farm, and there is Frank McHugh as Powell's handy man. In the palms of this stellar trio, neither dialogue nor situation can possibly go awry.

Powell goes in for a gown racket, bootlegging the designs for the latest costume creations. The tale takes him to Paris where he meets up with Verree Teasdale as a Hoboken lass posing as an archduchess. Reginald Owen turns in a perfect feat of performance as the French king of fashion. Out of the story complications come at a time when Powell stages a gorgeous revue wherein more than a hundred girls do a fan dance. It is really an entrancing spectacle.

The principals are swell and William Dieterle's direction is fast and smart. Photography and technical details generally are expert.

On stage, the matter of magic in Negro talent, Mr. Leslie, presents the cream of his recent legit show here plus new artists and specialties. There is the Cecil Mack choir, wondrous to hear; there are Katherine Perry and Edith Wilson to sing; Worthy and Jackson to dance, and one chap to dance so cleverly as to "stop the show" for many minutes; Eddie Hunter is in again with his comedy, the Duke Ellington band and others are also on hand, o that the revue is stellar throughout. And it ends with that magnificent spectacle of the witch dance.

Waldron's Casino

Waldron's Casino the coming week Jean Bedini heading the "Town Scandals" Burlesquers. In addition to the burlesque feature, with Nan Belle, Leila Hita, Millicent Phillips, Freddie Lewis, Myles Bell, George Wagner, Mark Lee and Tom Delay, there is a vaudeville bill and also two feature pictures, "Tillie and Gus" and "Before Morning."

Fifi Dorsay at Benny Rubin's Side on Bill

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

After an absence of two years Fifi Dorsay is in again. Being the livest, pertest and sauciest of comediennes, the lady is having pretty much her own way at the RKO Keith Boston. Down for songs, she sings them, and the audience wants more. For good measure, there is the merriest sort of chatter, which announcement rings in the name of that prime favorite, our own Benny Rubin.

Being both cast in the same comic mold, these two affairvere when they meet on the stage. Their ad-libbing is one of the best portions of the vaudeville program; folks howl with delight as they patter.

Benny appears first and gets a rousing hand. His familiar manner puts across his stories in snappy style; two of the outstanding bits are his geographic lesson and his slant on the daily dosen fad. But he has much more, and in addition he is used as an affable and thoroughly successful master of ceremonies.

Mankelle Dorsay's chief assets in her act are song and pantomime. At the piano she again has the gifted Roland Becker, well remembered from the past. Three songs are "wows," and tremendous applause was a fourth, likewise scoring.

With these two stars of stage and screen in high feather, the new show piles on entertainment. Reggie Childs is here with his orchestra from the Hotel Roosevelt in New York city—leader and band more than meet expectations. They have Don Howard to sing, and the capable Caskey-Crawford team to dance, and the whole turn has headline merit.

In addition, three lassies, Jarez, Renes and Vic, have a spectacular aerial act, and Pete, Peaches and Duke foot and tap it for ten expert minutes.

To match the Dorsay-Rubin fun on stage, comedy stars contract mirth from big time situations in a comedy of small town life on screen. The picture is "The Meanest Gal in Town," just the thing for Russell Mack to tackle as director with that hand that makes him one of Hollywood's best. The players are Pert Kelton, Zasu Pitts, James Gleason, Sheets Gallagher, and El Brendel, enough talent for two comedies. Result—much, very much, laughter.

Gayety Program

The Gayety tomorrow features on screen "Blood Money," with George Bancroft, Judith Anderson, Frances Dee and Blossom Seeley. The co-feature will be "Walls of Gold," with Sally Eilers, Norman Foster and Ralph Morgan. On the stage there will be five vaudeville acts.

Hope Hampton and Rosa Raisa to Sing Two Leading Roles Each During Engagement

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Opera—eight performances of it—at the Boston Opera House pre-empts attention in the coming week, with Maria Jeritza, Rosa Raisa, Carmela Ponselle, Hope Hampton, Josephine Lucchese, Elsa Alsen, and Lucy Moore as the featured divas. Miss Hampton and Raisa will sing two leading roles each, with the American prima donna in "Manon" and "Boheme" and with the famous European in "Aida" and "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Jeritza will inaugurate the week's events in "Walkuere." Fritz Reiner will conduct. Cesare Sodero will direct. Tuesday night's "Aida," and will appear in the Opera House pit again on Thursday night when "Rigoletto" with Luchese, will be given. "Boheme" and "Pagliacci" with Miss Moore will be sung under Sodero's direction.

Hope Hampton

This newest operatic venture is under the management of the ubiquitous Nazzaro, who calls himself "Mr." rather than "Signor," and whose dreams include a permanent annual program of opera for Boston under the auspices of his company, the New Boston Opera Company. His devotion to a moderate scale of prices has found high favor in a balky advance sheet of ticket orders and reservations, and hopes are high for success.

Advent of the opera has not served to lessen interest in Boston's two current downtown plays, "Ten Minute Alibi" at the Plymouth, and "Richard of Bordeaux," starring Dennis King, at the Colonial. These attractions will be here next week. Mr. King and "Richard of Bordeaux" will then travel to New York. So will Margaret Vines ("Queen Anne") although the presence of a representative of a famous film company at the Colonial last night may indicate that Miss Vines could travel further west than New York, were she inclined.

I was given to believe by the actress herself, however, that she is not greatly interested in pictures. She wishes to make a success in New York (which she will), and then commute between London and America whenever a good stage vehicle may warrant. Miss Vines reminds me of Helen Hayes, and is as diminutive in frame as the star of "Mary of Scotland." But she has the same glorious power over an audience that the Washington girl holds. Smitten with her performance, I recommended in my review of "Richard of Bordeaux" that picture scouts should see her performance forthwith.

Later I learned that she is homesick for London and her husband and child, and that she has gone to a hotel in the Beacon Hill section because that district flavors of her home environs . . . that she prefers the stage to the camera . . . that she is afraid of Hollywood and . . . that she is under a run-of-play contract in "Richard of Bordeaux" and "Richard of Bordeaux" is likely to enjoy a long, long "run."

"Double Door," featuring Mary Morris by public acclaim as a result of the New York engagement, follows "Ten Minute Alibi" at the Plymouth. Granville Bates, Anne Revere, Richard Kendrick, Ernest Woodward, Frothingham Lysons and Marjorie DaKon are the other principals. A quiet, intelligent study in sombre horror is one phrasing with which "Double Door" has been described. A shuttered house on Fifth ave., deliberately similar (although the author, Elizabeth McFadden, will not have it publicly so stated if possible) to that of the millionaire recluse Wendells, is the scene.

Globe Trotter

The startling expose of gangdom's rule in the Welfare Island Penitentiary, New York City, and the recent raid upon the prison is graphically shown in the new issue of Hearst Metrotone News, at Loew's Orpheum, with a description of the raid by the Globe Trotter, Commr. of Correction A. H. MacCormick tells of the shocking conditions he found and calls it "the worst prison in the United States." Pictures show the wreckage in the prison immediately following the raid and the collection of knives, hatchets and iron bars and other weapons that were taken from the prisoners.

Billie Burke to Supervise All Details in Radio Pictures' Talkie Venture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Feb. 3—Ziegfeld's "Follies" supervised by Billie Burke and produced for Radio by Louis Brock, is more than an idea. It's nearly a fact with negotiations so far advanced they are apt to be closed by the time this is written.

Universal's decision not to produce "The Great Ziegfeld" when the investment threatened to assume the proportions of the national debt, paved the way for Brock. Miss Burke will choose all the talent, select the songs and have a very active part in making the movie "Follies" as colorful as they were during Florenz Ziegfeld's lifetime.

Louella O. Parsons

There'd more than likely been mutiny on Edward Robinson's part if Jack Warner hadn't permitted him to play the character actor in "Dark Tower." Eddie read the play and parked himself right outside Jack's private office until he had an audience with the boss. "It's right up my alley," pleaded Eddie, "A murder mystery thriller in which I can play a character I will enjoy." "Dark Tower" is the play by George Kaufman and Alexander Woollcott for which Warners paid a pretty penny and the lead will belong to Napoleon Robinson as soon as he finishes his St. Helena film, "Exile."

Philip Merivale didn't consent to play "Caesar" in "Cleopatra" without plenty of coaxing from Cecil De Mille. A swell actor and one of the reasons Helen Hayes' play, "Mary of Scotland," is a current success, Merivale has reason to feel bitter toward Hollywood. He was brought here by Fox and was never used in a single picture. His enforced holiday in Hollywood may have netted him about $60,000 but he felt he lost double that in prestige. All he has to do now is to be as good a Caesar as he was a husband in "Cynara" on the stage.

The lady, Claudette Colbert I mean, will need a lot of convincing before she consents to play the lead in "Honor Bright." Claudette argues that the woman's role can be played by almost any actress and that the big part belongs to the man. Besides, Claudette begins work the first of March as "Cleopatra," and she further argues that it will rush her too much to try to get in another picture before that time. Harry Willcoxon, the Marc Antony in Cecil De Mille's life, will replace Herbert Marshall in this same "Honor Bright" while Tay Garnett, who originally signed Willcoxon in London and induced him to come to Hollywood, will direct.

Loud are the whispers in Hollywood that Raquel Torres and Stephen Ames will get married while the New York millionaire is in Hollywood. Difficult for us, however, to get excited over Raquel's marriages. She and Charlie Feldman had the day set at Agua Caliente, the attendants picked and all arrangements made when the Mexican beauty changed her mind. She and her boy friend, Stephen, his brother Paul and Renee Torres made a happy foursome at the Cocoanut Grove at the regular Tuesday night.

In the days when the movies were only a gleam in Thomas Edison's eyes, Laura Burt was receiving recognition as a stage actress. She has long since retired, but now she has come to Hollywood to have a try at the movies, not as Miss Burt, but as Laura B. Stanford. And thereby hangs an interesting story! The late Henry Stanford, well known actor and a cousin by marriage, bequeathed Miss Burt a legacy on condition that she use his name. So under the new moniker Miss Burt is now established in Hollywood, ready to do a Marie Dressler, May Robson or a Helen Lowell.

A Line or Two

Joseph McGillicudy Sherman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity genius, leaves me desolate. Nobody to fight with for six long weeks while Joe is away getting his health back. He and his actress wife, Mary Doran, left last night on the Santa Monica for a six-weeks' trip along the coast of Mexico. While Joe is getting well Paul Snell and Barrett Kiesling will hold down the job as first assistants to Howard Strickling at M-G-M. A remodeled dressing room done in modernistic style was ready and waiting for Marion Davies when she started work today on "Operator 13." Marion will begin on another picture as soon as she finishes "Operator 13." That is the penalty of having a hit like "Going Hollywood." Two jobs for Karen Morley. One at Columbia and one at Radio. She replaces Corinne Griffith in "The Crime Doctor." Ernest Pascal, who is writing "Napoleon" for Warner Brothers, says it's true that Josephine was small and dark but that Edward Robinson is taller than the real Napoleon, hence it was necessary to have a taller Josephine. After all, Mr. Pascal says, this is a romance and not an actual historical version.

Snapshots of Hollywood

BILLIE BURKE, too, too lovely by these days, escorted many places by the attentive DAVID BURTON; the NEIL HAMILTONS giving MRS. OSCAR LEWISOHN (Edna May) a dinner at which many interesting celebrities were present; SALLY EILERS keeping an important bridge game waiting while she embraced her bridegroom and kissed him; JOAN CRAWFORD, FRANCHOT TONE and Joan's inevitable gardenia, as usual, a part of the Cocoanut Grove atmosphere; WILLIAM HAINES saying good-bye to Hollywood with a dinner party to a few cronies—he leaves Saturday for a six months' European trip; MADELINE CARROLL arrives on the Ile de France Feb. 12; she will be given a welcome by many friends when she reaches Hollywood to begin her American screen career; LILA LEE'S luncheon for her sister a most successful affair; SALLY O'NEILL off for New York via plane; she plays a part for MICKEY NEILAN in a picture to be made there. That's all today.

Children Can Figure It

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

How much money is there in the 60-cent dollar?

Let your little son figure it out in purchasing power.

There's still a hundred pennies in the old iron wheel.

Lollipops are a cent each. Give him a dollar.

If the kid comes back with 100 lollipops then all is well, the nation is saved and the sun will rise tomorrow.

And the boy will come home again with 100 lollipops.

But if he is a very little boy you'd better make the experiment with a dime.

'Gallant Lady' at Orpheum

One of the finest films of the season, "Gallant Lady," starring the beautiful Ann Harding, opened at Loew's Orpheum Theater yesterday for its first downtown showings, together with a big time vaudeville.

The picture deals with the experience of an unwed mother who is forced to assign her child for adoption immediately after its birth. Later, having become a success as a business woman, she accidentally meets in Paris the child for whom she has never ceased to yearn. Faced with the possibility of being reunited with her boy, she is compelled to decide between keeping silent regarding her identity as the child's mother in order to be with him, or revealing the facts in order to play fair with the man she loves with the possibility of wrecking the little fellow's future.

Consistent with the quality of the screen presentation is a vaudeville show that is very entertaining. Artie Lewis and Peggy Ames, as the headliners, present a comedy singing and talking act that is a treat.

Andrea Marsh, an attractive young lady billed as "having a voice as mellow as the tone of a 'cello," lived up to her billing with an unusual song program. Dancee in addition to several comedy numbers, featured the offering by Alexander and Santos.

Frank Silk Is Howard Star

At the Old Howard, beginning musical act. The films are "The Monday matinee, will be presented the "Blushing Widows" Burlesquers, with Frank X. Silk and Charles Levine as comedy stars. The feminine contingent will introduces Charby Bonneau, Wanda Devon, Bee Keller, "Lucky" Darling and Elinor Walent. Others of prominence are Carl Power, Frank Scannell, George Gould and High and Low.

The continuous program will have Manners and Davis, lively steppers, and the Viano Troupe.

Shawn His Best Self in Ensemble for Men

By MOSES SMITH

Ted Shawn and his ensemble of men dancers gave the first of three performances at the Repertory last night before an audience which all but filled the theater. The other two performances are being given this afternoon and evening.

It is readily understandable why Ted Shawn has a large and miscellaneous public in Boston, in contrast with many other dancers of more limited appeal. Most of his dances and those of his ensemble are based on familiar subject-matter, or are transparent enough to be readily grasped by the average on-looker. In these dances, too, Shawn is his best and most characteristic self.

I refer to numbers like Shawn's celebrated Indian dance, "Invocation to the Thunderbird," for which a brief program note is sufficient to explain the "action." Or the Osage-Pawnee Dance of Greeting, from the ensemble. Or the Flamenco dances in which Shawn struts the Spaniard. Or the new "Dance of the Threshing Floor" of Shawn.

At the opposite extreme are dances less imitative, or entirely original, like the long "American Epic," "John Brown Sees the Glory." I confess that even with the help of the program note I was unable to follow this glory, nor to make much sense out of the dance. Perhaps I am unsympathetic. But to the extent that this dance was original in conception, it seemed to me weak. The same applies, with less force, to the opening group of "music visualizations."

Mention should be made of several delightful or engrossing numbers: "The French Sailor" and "Fetish," danced by Barton Mumaw, and "Workers' Songs of Middle Europe," danced by the ensemble. The accompanying pianist, Jess Meeker, not only put in a hard evening of playing,

Braggiotti Plays

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 21, Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti, popular two-piano team, come to Boston for a recital in Jordan Hall. Braggiotti is one of the Boston Braggiottis. He received his education in this city, in Florence, and in Paris. It was in a music publishing house in Paris that Fray and Braggiotti first met. Fray is a Parisian.

SUNDAY ADVERTISER

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

AT A TEA THIS AFTERNOON at the Hotel Somerset, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert G. Woodworth are announcing the engagement of their granddaughter, Miss Grace Woodworth Minot, to Mr. John Wentworth Peirce . . .

Miss Minot is the daughter of Mr. William Minot of Marlborough st. and the late Lucy Woodworth Minot . . . She was presented to society in the season of 1929-30 after being graduated from the Winsor School . . . She is a member of the Junior League and Chilton Club, and is now studying at the Carrie Walker School of Fine Arts . . .

GRACE MINOT

Mr. Peirce is the son of Mrs. Howard W. Brown of Boston and Topsfield and the late Thomas W. Peirce. He prepared for college at St. Mark's, was graduated from Harvard in 1933 and is now studying at the Harvard Architectural School. His clubs are Hasty Pudding, Signet Society, Institute of 1770, Varsity, Union Boat Club, Harvard Lampoon, and Phoenix S. K. . . . There are no immediate plans for the wedding.

Miss Virginia Wells and Miss Jean Fuller went over to New York yesterday to spend the week-end . . . they are chaperoned by youthful Mrs. Clifford Fuller, Jean's mother. Miss Wells is taking the trip to recuperate from her mid-year exams at the Erskine School which she finished Thursday . . . They are returning in time to attend the Black and Blue ball . . .

* * *

The Charlotte Cushman Club has announced for next season a series of six intimate afternoon recitals by prominent artists, to be held in the Sheraton Room of the Copley-Plaza Hotel . . . these recitals will be held on the subscription plan and will be followed by an informal recention and tea . . .

Dorothy Harding to Aid Drive

MISS DOROTHY HARDING WILL ASSIST customers who come to buy flowers in Harry Quint's shop in the Hotel Victoria corner on Wednesday and Friday of next week, February 7 and 9. Mr. Quint is donating more than a fourth of his sales on these two days to the Emergency Campaign fund and prominent members of society, always in the lead when charity calls, are acting as volunteer saleswomen . . .

Miss Harding, as chairman of the provisional members of the Junior League, will head a group of sister debutantes whose bright league smocks will mark them as volunteers in the flower shop . . . her assistants will be Miss Eleanor Shaw, Miss Frances Turner, Miss Molly Weed, Miss Marion Leeson, Miss Joanna Palfrey, Miss Leslie Bremer, Miss Molly Wheeler and Miss Eleanor Eustis . . . Not content with being among the first to give their money contributions to the fund, debutantes and their mothers have been working tirelessly at the Women's Division headquarters contributed by the Copley-Plaza, where Mrs. Reginald W. Bird and Mrs. Robert Homans still conduct an information bureau . . . the younger girls run errands all over the hotel . . . their mothers and older sisters are canvassing from door to door for the fund . . . they have acted as sales girls and mannequins and now they are to emulate Raquel Meller in "Who'll Buy My Violets" . . .

Mr. Quint needs no introduction to Bostonians, who bought flowers from him when, as a very young boy, he was a familiar figure on his father's horse-drawn movable flower shop he brought to their doors . . . Daughters and even granddaughters of his original customers will assist in his attractive shop next week . . .

Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., to Assist

WHILE THE DEBUTANTES will no doubt sell many corsages now that midyears are over and dancing again in vogue, more experienced hands will supply the wants of those whose problems are not confined to the color of a dress. Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., president of the Massachusetts Federation of Garden Clubs, will be in the shop on Wednesday morning and part of Friday . . . Mrs. William B. Snow, Jr., president of the Junior League Garden Club, will give her services on Friday until 3:30 and Mrs. Charles C. Cabot, whose garden in her recently finished Dover estate attests to her interest in growing things will be there on Wednesday from 2 to 4:30 . . .

Miss Isabel DeC. Porter, whose talent in landscape architecture is evidenced in many of the beautiful estates about Boston, will be on hand in the shop next Wednesday from 2:00 until 5:00 and customers may consult her during that time on any of their gardening problems . . .

Anyone planning a special feature of a garden may order it on either of these two days. Mr. Quint guarantees delivery on any specified date whether it is to be in Bucksport, Me., or out in Wisconsin . . . If you have always wanted a special color for a certain corner of your garden, you can invite your friends now to view it next June or July, and this "grown-to-order" service of Mr. Quint's will have it in your own garden when you want it . . . your imagination might fancy a rare Columbine, rust color Salpiglossis, pure white Comet Aster, lemon verbena or a special violet shade of browallia . . .

Campaign Canvassers Report Progress

SOME OF BOSTON'S FINEST WOMEN filled the ballrooms of the Copley-Plaza yesterday for the third weekly report luncheon of the Emergency Relief Campaign . . . It is most encouraging and inspiring to hear these tireless and enthusiastic workers for the welfare of all the marvelous institutions in metropolitan Boston give the reports of their progress in soliciting . . .

At the head table, over which Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey presided, we saw Mrs. Bernard C. Weld, Mrs Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. Malcolm Bradley Wendell, who brought Madame Marguerita Sylva with her, Mrs. Horace S. Frazer, Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, Mrs. Harvey H. Bundy, Mrs. Morton P. Prince and Miss Mary Ward, whose oxford gray suit was enlivened by a vivid red blouse . . .

Constance Turner

Listening and enjoying the luncheon at the nearby tables were Miss Constance Turner, in rust tones, Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw, Mrs. Philip Sherwood, who wore a tailored navy suit with light blue blouse and felt hat . . . Mrs. Arthur Perry, Miss Lorraine Leeson, Mrs. Gaspar Bacon in becoming shades of brown with mink trimming, Joseph P. Carney, Miss Polly Powers, Mrs. Robert C. Hornung, in rust and white print, and Mrs. John S. Ames . . .

SOCIETY'S FAVORITES AGAIN DO USHER DUTY

MISS POLLY COTTER

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN CLUB events always attract a large gathering of society leaders and the young set's smartest dressed debutantes. Here are Miss Polly Cotter and Miss Ellen Bottomley as they officiated as ushers at the informal recital given this week by Mme. Marguerite Sylva. Miss Cotter, debutante daughter of the Richard J. of Cambridge, is wearing a black crepe dress on straight lines, depending for its distinction on a stripped taffeta bow at neckline. Miss Bottomley, daughter of Mrs. John A. Bottomley, is studying music and working as a volunteer at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. Her becoming outfit is of bright green with a mink trimmed cape.

Junior Guild to Conduct Bridge

A Mardi Gras party on the evening of Shrove Tuesday at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge will bring out a festive crowd of parishioners of Christ church, Cambridge, and their friends.

The Junior Guild of Christ church is sponsoring the bridge party, and the committee, which consists of young married women in the guild, includes Mrs. William H. Goodwin, chairman.

in the social world

With Dorothy Whipple Fry

MISS BETTY GRINNELL, a debutante of this season, is much in the limelight. We saw her the other day modeling at Walter's Fashion Show in an adorable print frock that predicted the summer style. A clever combination of blue and black with tucked back and front bodice, lovely on her slender figure.

Daphny Foster, also of Brookline and very attractive with her new wind blown bob, wore a brown print with one of the new Joan Crawford necklaces. Miss Madeline Earhard in a gorgeous long sleeved dinner gown of turquoise crepe with one of the very new cape collars and an exceedingly long skirt. By the way artificial flowers are coming into their own this spring worn as corsages, trimmings on the shoulders and bright little touches on the hats.

Anne Davidson

Anne Davidson showed a gorgeous breath of spring in a yellow satin print of spring flowers with a bouquet of artificial blossoms at the back.

MARY ESTHER COOPER who made her debut last year is still busy with many social activities and gayeties. Her modeling in red and white pleated print with a large frill and a very becoming white broad brimmed hat created one of the most striking ensembles.

Lee Marston in a black and white print perfect for cruise wear. Soft thin crepe, white leather belt and slenderizing design with that new and trig shoulder effect. Jane MacLeod showing a gorgeous turquoise evening gown with detachable cape and rhinestone strap in back.

Cold weather ahead! That means that you had better order your fresh fuel supply right now. Daily in the Coal-Coke-Oil Columns of the American and Advertiser you will find a list of wholesale fuel dealers who can serve you on a moment's notice. Order now while prices are still low.

Make It Possible to Love Neighbors as Ourselves

By ARTHUR LEE KINSOLVING

Rector of Trinity Church

A few years ago, some one characterized one element among our young and middle-aged people as "sliding down the back stairs of civilization, carrying the dishes with them."

For such we have steadily less respect. But the years have brought us profound respect for another element who are toiling up the main stairs of civilization, and carrying the burden of the hopes of the future.

Out in the Chicago area, in Evanston, Illinois, there is a stalwart American, straightforward, clear thinking, big hearted, named Ernest Tittle, a man and a minister whom I think of as one of the builders of this century. The honesty and earnestness of the man is well expressed in these words from his lectures at Yale, on the Beecher Foundation.

"As things are now, we cannot love our neighbors as ourselves . . . Although today there is more than enough bread to go around, it is not going around and, apparently, cannot be made to go around in the economic system which we now have—a fact which condemns our present system far more severely than do the bitterest words of its bitterest critics. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: that according to Jesus—and according to history!—is one of the most important and imperative words that ever proceeded out of the mouth of God. And today we cannot obey it, even those of us who are eager to do so. We find ourselves entrapped in a system which makes it impossible for us to obey it. But obey it we must. My own conviction is that obedience means recovery, and that disobedience means revolution. The second commandment, then, is this: Thou shalt build an economic system and a social order in which it shall be possible for people to love their neighbors as themselves."

Phyllis Long Will Be Bride in Milton

THE ENGAGEMENT OF Miss Phyllis Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb H. Long of Milton, to Mr. Donald A. Foley of Dorchester is announced by her parents. Mr. Foley is the son of the late Louis A. Foley, former member of the Massachusetts Legislature and Mrs. Foley. Miss Long attended Bryant and Stratton's Business School, Boston.

EX-FIRE CHIEF AND MRS. JAMES M. FOLEY of Cambridge left yesterday for an extended vacation in Miami, Fla.

MRS. ROBERT J. REILLY, president of the Guild of the Infant Savior, announces an innovation for the next meeting. In order to familiarize members and friends of the Guild of the wonderful work that the Catholic Charitable Bureau is doing, a meeting will be held next Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Catherine Moore Settlement House at 11 Tileston st., Boston.

Mrs. R. J. Reilly

This settlement house offers a multitude of friendly services to the very poor of the neighborhood. Last year 52,000 children passed through the doors to be helped.

The speaker of the afternoon will be the spiritual director of the Guild, the Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds.

Miss Rosemary Stanford, soprano, will be the soloist. She is a member of the Cecilian mixed quartet and will be heard in a group of songs accompanied by Miss Cora Gatineau, talented composer and accompanist of the Cecilian quartet.

Miss Gatineau will play an original composition.

MISS KATHERINE WALSH of Gloucester st., will open her home next Saturday evening, for an informal dance, for members of the Sigma Kappa Alpha Sorority.

Assisting Miss Walsh are Miss Miriam Clark, the president, and the Misses Eleanor Frederick, Mary Campbell, Anne Ryan and Virginia Sullivan.

Plans are being formulated for the annual supper dance which is to be held at the Hotel Continental, Cambridge, on Tuesday evening, April 3. Miss Ryan of Chestnut Hill is chairman of this event, the proceeds of which will go to charity.

THE JUNIOR MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE of the Woman's Charity Club of Boston are meeting for a luncheon and bridge party today, at Filene's restaurant. Miss Helen Caswell, the president, presides at a short business meeting. After the luncheon general plans will be completed for the second supper dance to be held at the Hotel Buckminster on February 9.

The members of the committee include the Misses Polly King, Theresa Shee, Barbara Taylor, May Newell, Irma Penn, Mary Ester Howland, Dorothy Knowlton, Olive Crawe and Alice Graham.

The proceeds from the various affairs that are arranged by this committee are given to the Massachusetts Women's Hospital, which is maintained and owned by the Women's Charity Club.

Proceeds From Sales for Aid Campaign

MRS. SAMUEL E. MORISON, Mrs. Morton P. Prince, Mrs. Reeve Chipman and Miss Jessie Sherman are pouring tomorrow afternoon at the opening of the Boston Society of Independent Artists' exhibit, at 40 Joy st.

Mrs. James Craige is acting as chairman for the show committee and Mrs. Charles Butcher has charge of the tea, with Miss Marjorie Prince, the Misses Mary and Faith Chipman, Miss Emily Morison, Miss Hope Lord, Miss Aline Kilham and Miss Elizabeth Berenson, to assist her.

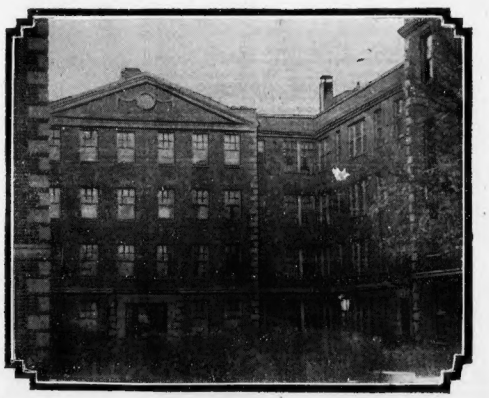
Several members of the society have offered to give the proceeds from the sale of their pictures to the Emergency Campaign fund. Among the exhibitors are Mrs. Oakes Ames, Mrs. Samuel E. Morison, Mr. Charles Hopkinson, Dr. Frita Talbot, Rev. Phillips Endicott Osgood, D. D., John Whorf, Mrs. Levi H. Greenwood, Mrs. Ole T. Russell, and Mrs. Thomas Motley. The show continues through Feb. 25.

Titled Speaker at Meeting

The fortunate coincidence of date and speaker for the fifth of the Monday mornings of Diversion, on Feb. 12, at 11 o'clock, in the Georgian Room of the Statler Hotel, will undoubtedly result in a large addition of men to the usual interesting group of subscribers.

Lincoln's Birthday could not be more appropriately recognized than by listening to the distinguished Sir Frederick Whyte, who will speak on "Democracy at the Cross Roads," and Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, who sponsors this unique series, is being congratulated on Sir Frederick's postponement of his return to England, which enables him as guest speaker to present a subject on which he is peculiarly qualified to express opinions.

Finding the Modern Apartment That Pleases



IN THE FENWAY

64 QUEENSBERRY ST.

This modern apartment building is one of the group under the Management of George K. Higgins of 1318 Beacon Street, Brookline. Here one can locate in a one or two room kitchenette suite at extremely moderate rental. This property is carefully supervised. The service includes electrical refrigeration, abundant heat and continuous hot water.

It is very convenient to downtown car service. Mr. Higgins, like other aggressive Apartment Property Managers, finds that the daily use of the classified columns of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser to secure desirable tenants—is a profitable investment.

This office finds that the assistance of the Barbara Holmes Free Rental Bureau located at the R. H. White Company—is invaluable.

Reading and Writing

—By William Soskin—

OLD MAN ECONOMICS is the villain of Phyllis Bentley's new novel, A Modern Tragedy, and he can leer and curl his slick black mustache and utter such deadly and sardonic laughter as no Desperate Desmond has ever achieved.

Miss Bentley is one of the more socially-minded of the British writing ladies, one who senses more drama in the dole, the jobless march and the closed textile mill than in Miss Virginia Woolf's little cocker spaniels, Miss Clemence Dane's boy poets, Miss G. B. Stern's matriarchs or Beverley Nichols' antiques and perennials. She is the daughter of a Yorkshire textile family, as the readers of Inheritance will recall, and thoroughly steeped in the processes of spinning, dyeing and finishing cloth, and in the industrial life that surrounds those processes.

Inheritance traced that life through a number of generations of textile men, dramatising the conflict of capital and labor through the Industrial Revolution and injecting in the bloodstream of the Yorkshire folk economic serums which shaped their characters and formulated their emotions.

Crimes That Grow

A MODERN TRAGEDY carries these people through the present day. Over the modern era in Yorkshire, Miss Bentley's novel tells us, hovers the menace of economic disease which disrupts the lives and characters of all men—of all helpless workers, the agitators, the old-fashioned upright and public-spirited manufacturers and the new-fashioned and more oblique financiers who juggle textile mills, options, liens and bankruptcies with an immoral skill.

These men commit crimes against society in the course of their struggle to defeat the depression. Strong men like Tasker, the industrialist who gets control of the mills in this story through unscrupulous but daring tactics, cheat stockholders out of their property. Weak men, like Walter Haight, who is Tasker's dupe, sacrifice their parents and families in order to persevere in the insane race for wealth. Class-conscious agitators, like Milner Schofield, one of the Yorkshire workers, sacrifice the immediate subsistence of their fellow workers in order to promote their remote "revolutionary" aims.

All of these men commit crimes, but they are not criminally minded. Back of their crimes lies their fear of one another; and back of their fear lies their lust for power; and back of their lust for power is the villain—Old Man Economics.

Justice Back of All

I DO NOT wish to mislead you into thinking that Miss Bentley has written a dull allegory concerning these social evils. A Modern Tragedy happens to be rooted in industrial soil. But that soil produces character and conflict which are the very life substance of dramatic writing.

The secret of the succes which undoubtedly awaits this novel, A Modern Tragedy, is exactly that which lay at the basis of Miss Bentley's earlier work, Inheritance. It is a powerful gift for naturalistic writing. She understands the factory, the machine, the job, the ledger, the bank loan and the bankruptcy.

Miss Bentley writes openly, honestly, almost artlessly. In many respects she resembles Theodore Dreiser. She can construct a massive, solid social picture out of details patiently and humanly considered. At the heart of her writing there is the sense of Justice and of true innocence which lies at the heart of Dreiser's work.

Strong in Human Drama

TO OBJECT to Miss Bentley's occasional gaucherie in the course of her exposition of a modern drama is equivalent to complaining of Dreiser's misuse of the comma in An American Tragedy. It reveals the critic's own failings.

Miss Bentley centers her social picture around the person of Walter Haight, the candid, simple fellow whose lack of shrewdness, of moral strength and iron, leads her and his family and his honest associates into a morass of financial deceit. The story ends in a trial which should bring to mind a few industrial and banking magnates in our own communities whose careers ended in the courtroom.

Miss Bentley draws a moral from it all—about mutual love and the need for banishing fear. You may not agree with her Christian conclusion, but I defy you to remain unaffected by the human drama and the social picture she creates.

THOSE discriminating readers who are fortunate and wise enough to have a copy of Mr. Clarence Day's God and My Father on the library shelf will be interested to know that one of Mr. Day's recent contributions to this page, One Year Ago, has just been published in a neat volume by the Yale University Press with the title, In the Green Mountain Country. The book is Mr. Day's account of the death and the burial of Calvin Coolidge.

That One Brief Instant

ULTIMATELY, of course, all things must end;
The fears we shrink from and the loves we trust.
Our roses mingle in a paler blend;
Our towers topple to the leering dust;
Those shining towers that we cherished so,
And loomed above them in our pigmy pride,
To shout our prowess to the world below,
And wander through them with no wish denied.
The rainbow bridges that our thought have spanned;
The slender windings that our love has spun:
The witless toil of our too-eager hand.
Shall vanish like a cobweb in the sun.
These are but structures of pale gossamer,
So let the present for the past atone;
And, oh! be wary, lest dim shadows blur
That one brief instant we may call our own.

Clare MacDermott.

History at a Glance

—By Will Cuppy—

Leif the Lucky

LEIF ERICSSON, or Leaf Lucky, was the son of Eric Thorvaldsson, or Eric the Red, a large, cheerful Norwegian who went around killing the neighbors in his spare time. Because of this bad habit Eric was banished from Norway, so he went to Iceland, where he thought the neighbors would be less fussy.

In Iceland Eric married Thorhild the Bouncing, the daughter of Jorund Atlisson and Thorbjorg the Ship Chested, and they had three sons named Lief Ericsson, Thorvald Ericsson and Thornstein Ericsson. Eric was very fond of home life, but one day he broke loose and murdered Eyjolf the Foul and a few others and was banished from Iceland. So there he was again.

His next stop was Greenland, where he acquired a little more poise and worked out a new way to annoy people. He returned to Iceland and said that Greenland was a perfectly wonderful place to live, and a great many believed him, because you can always find people like that.

In 985 A. D. several hundred men followed him to Greenland with their wives and they never heard the last of it. They all lived in little stone huts exactly alike and never had any fur and were therefore civilized.

After that Eric became more respectable, because it paid so much better. He got so that he murdered hardly anyone. He had also learned that there is no use murdering people, because there are always so many left.

BY THIS time Leif Ericsson was old enough to discover things. He was a tall, handsome fellow of the Viking type and the girls had noticed it and he had to keep moving. So he bought a ship from Bjarni Herjulfsson in 1003 A. D. and sailed away and discovered America about five hundred years before Columbus ever heard of the place.

First they came to the coast of Canada. Leif went ashore and looked over the ground and remarked, "Come on, boys, let's get out of here!" This is one of the great sayings of history. Before leaving they named it Helluland to show how they felt.

Then they went on to Cape Cod, where they found birds-eye maple and wheat. One day an old German named Tyrker found some vines and grapes. He returned to camp laughing and rolling his eyes and jabbering as if he had just thought of a wonderful joke, and to this day nobody knows what stirred him as so funny. Old Tyrker was a smallish man with insignificant features, but that sheds little light on the subject.

So they all ate plenty of grapes and old Tyrker was named Tyrker the Grape Finder and the country was named Vinland or Wineland the Good. Some say that the birds-eye maple was birch and the wheat was wild rice and the grapes were whortleberries. If you want to think so, there's no law against it. Leif was rather simple in spots, but he would hardly name a country after whortleberries.

THAT Winter Leif and his men had a very good time around Buzzard's Bay and Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard and Menemsha Bight and such places. And once they sailed to the mouth of the Hudson and explored an island there, and Leif said it was all right to visit, but he wouldn't live there if you gave it to him.

On the way home they stopped at Boston and found some strange vegetables and a few nuts. They reached Greenland on schedule time and nothing whatever came of it all.

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

IF there is one thing I despise, detest, abominate and abhor it is an exhibition of trained animals. When elephants, in all their strange dignity, are brought out and forced to move about a stage to the snapping of a whip, each holding the tail of the one in front of him with his trunk, something happens to me. Out of their jungles they have been brought to this, made to sit at a dinner table, and ring a bell, and act, not like the intelligent brutes they are, but like gross imitations of us humans.

Lions and tigers, forming a pyramid, only fill me with dismay. A man in a beautiful evening suit bids them take their places on little stools and they cavort for our delight, instead of racing through those dim regions where they rightfully belong. And nothing bores me more than to see a lady in pink tights with a flock of trained cockatoos floating around her, perching on her anatomy, fluttering to the ceiling of the auditorium, and then resting on her pretty shoulders and head. It is about as useless an exhibition as one could imagine. Seallons, flapping their way to seasons, balancing balloons on their noses, twirling in rhythmical circles, uttering nervous cries, fail to move me with anything but pity for their slavish antics. The reward of a fish for their trouble only seems an insult to their vast intelligence, and when their act is over and done, and they slip back into their boxes, I am delighted that the poor things can rest—until the next performance.

I HAVE seen baboons that knew more than their trainers. Dressed up in human attire, in a de rigueur suit, leaping through hoops of fire and flimsy paper, they have seemed ashamed of the travesty. They have been taught the most unnecessary tricks. They do everything but talk and smile. But I have always wondered what they thought of us, sitting out there in such even rows, giggling at their actions, laughing at their foolish capers. They must wonder—and I am sure they think—why we live in places like this, when we might be out in open spaces; and they have probably longed for their old privacy in the solitudes of Africa.

Some years ago when I was in England I learned that trained animals in circuses and vaudeville are no longer permitted. Don't tell me that cruelty does not enter into their education. A monkey wasn't meant to jump rope, to put a napkin under his chin to drink something, to smoke like a bottle of beer and pretend that he is intoxicated. In order to teach him to do these preposterous things, no little urging must have occurred. It wasn't a delicate, friendly pat on the back that brought him to so low an estate. A lash was undoubtedly the cruel reminder that he was constantly in dread of. The trainer, to my mind, is the primitive animal—not the little brute that skips so gaily about.

During the World War, when we were all a little hysterical about the German language, I happened to go to a vaudeville performance where some trained dogs were brought out. I was down in the very front row, and a stout fellow came out for his act, surrounded by the best looking canines I had ever seen. He was evidently a Teuton. But, the times being what they were, he addressed them in French, poor wretch, and it was terrible French. "Ah! mon chiens! Ici!" he would cry; and not one of the troupe responded. What did they know of that pretty tongue! Then, under his breath, and snapping his teeth, he would whisper, "Mein Hund, hier!" And instantly they came to him, and did as they were bidden. I felt sorry for that trainer—he, too, was a victim—a victim of prejudice. After all, he was earning his living. He had to go on, somehow, before an enemy nation at war with his own country, and evidently he could speak no English. It was pitiful to consider his case. An alien, even his German dogs would have been despised if the crowded house had got to hissing, but they were from the land of the Kaiser. Hisses would have greeted this turn, instead of cheers.

I THINK too much of all animals to see them made the lackeys of mankind in such a ridiculous way. I don't like to see a beautiful horse galloping around in a circle and dancing a waltz when the orchestra strikes up. He has other uses in the world. If the automobile has robbed him of his old-time job, in the economic scheme of things, one might like to think of him spending his last days grazing in some green meadow, rather than being confined in a vaudeville house. A lonely eagle in a cage is not an inspiring sight. Zoos, it is contended, are educative places; but couldn't as much be learned of wild animals through picture books and encyclopedias?

"Now, remember, this is both luncheon and dinner."

Letters I'd Love To Mail

—By J. P. McEvoy—

Hollywood, California,
February 2, 1934.

DEVOTED ADMIRER,
LaPorte, Indiana.

Dear Ad: I think it was pretty nice of you to drop everything and write to me. These old nerve ends enjoy a pleasant massage now and then. Happily, too, I can agree with you. This gives you an unique place in the role of my correspondents.

But when you ask me to review your New Year resolutions and tell you of my own, you are adding to my perplexities. Why do you want to do that, if you love me so?

As for your New Year resolutions, let me say as briefly and succinctly as possible, I don't care what you resolved for the New Year. I will add, it doesn't make any difference.

In this you belong to the great horde of resolution makers who break out in a rash of resolves each January. By April—and I wouldn't be exaggerating if I said early in February—the fever is down, the heat is off and you are boiling down the broad road, kicking and snorting.

That whinny around the bend used to be me, but no more. I break no more New Year resolutions, because I don't make that kind.

WHY should I tell you about the kind I make? You would not think them noble. You would sneer at them. You would pity me. A weakling, you would say, and then you wouldn't be a devoted admirer any more, and you wouldn't write to me and say I was significant. That would cut me to the quick, wherever that is.

How could I bring myself to tell you that my first resolution on New Year's Day is a resolve to make only the kind of resolutions I know I can keep. So I begin by making a budget for the year of potential income and necessary expenses.

This, of course, shows that I will run out of money sometime in March and will have nothing to live on for the rest of the year.

Neatly putting all the figures in their proper columns I total everything, multiply by my age, divide by my telephone number and burn the result.

By this time I am in a glow. I have started the New Year right. I make one more resolve. I resolve to go to bed and sleep. I keep that one, too.

The following morning I awaken greatly refreshed and eager to do some more resolving. I begin by resolving not to take a cold shower, not to exercise before breakfast, not to get up until noon, and to put off everything until tomorrow. I then resolve not to make any more resolutions until Washington's Birthday.

BEFORE I know it, Spring has come and it is time for a new batch of resolutions. I then resolve I will not start a garden. I will not do any physical work of any kind during the summer, I will not devote my spare time to learning how to play a guitar, or how to whistle like Bing Crosby.

I then resolve to lump autumn and winter together and try to ignore both of them. I resolve not to take long walks in the woods, not to spend the winter evenings improving my mind. I resolve not to worry about debts, deficits, or the coming of the holidays. I resolve not to get out an original Christmas card. Not to send presents, and to think pleasantly about some nice warm place for the winter but not to go there unless I am shoved.

AND THEN, wonder of wonders, it is New Year's Eve once more! I have survived another year, and all my resolutions are intact. I have kept faith with myself. I have proved to myself I have indomitable will power. That pleases me so much I sit right down and resolve to repeat the same process the following year.

I recommend this program to you, dear Devoted Admirer. It may not sound so noble, but IT WORKS.

Sincerely,
J. P. McEVOY.

Definitions of a Gentleman

—By Oliver Herford—

I WAS looking over something I had just written the other day, when I came across the word "gentleman," and the sight of it brought back to me the feeling of doubt that had assailed me when I was hesitating whether or not to make use of the word.

This time the feeling of doubt got the better of me and I crossed out "gentleman" and wrote "man" in its place. It then happened that the moment after I had made the change in my script I was called to the telephone. The party who called me up had a lot to say and a lot of time to spare, and it was fully fifteen minutes before I got back to my manuscript. I hate talking on the 'phone, anyway, and the movement (which might better be described as a "jab") with which I drove my pencil through the word "man" was vengefully automatic.

I substituted the word "person."

HALF an hour later the telephone rang again. It was the "person." He said there was a gentleman he wanted me to meet and would I be at home tomorrow afternoon, say at tea time? I am a ready liar when the occasion prompts and I replied that I should be out of town for the rest of the week. Then I quickly put up the receiver and turning to my script I put out the word "person" and restored "gentleman."

All of which is designed to show that "gentleman" is a dangerous double-edged word which only servants can use with perfect safety, when speaking of the master or his guests. Strictly speaking the term belongs to another and quieter period and is today only at home in such phrases as "a gentleman of the old school," "a gentleman of leisure," "a scholar and a gentleman"—and "Gentlemen, the King!"

THE ancestry of the word "gentleman" is not very certain. It was to satisfy myself on this point that I consulted Dr. Samuel Johnson, who can always be relied upon to tell you whether an English word comes of good old Anglo-Saxon stock or is descended from no one knows whom. This is how it is defined in Dr. Johnson's dictionary: "Gentlemen—from homo gentilis, a man of ancestry. All other derivations seem to be whimsical."

Speaking of the great lexicographer, you surely must know Johnson's definition of "lexicographer" Here it is, just as I took it down from my own copy of the dictionary: "Lexicographer—A writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge, that busies himself in tracing the original and detailing the signification of words."

Among the quotations from other authors in Johnson's Dictionary is this not very flattering one from the poet Spenser:

"He holdeth himself a gentleman and refuseth to work which he saith is the life of a peasant and a churl. But endureth himself to his weapon and to the gentlemanly trade of stealing."

The best definition of "gentleman" in English is this one made by Henry Labouchere—"A gentleman is a man who never unintentionally offends anyone."

To an Alley-Cur in Winter

POOR cur, whose stark-ribbed sides are pinched and lean,
I know the toes of schoolboys' boots are rough:
I know your buried bones have been gnawed clean.

The garbage cans are bare, I understand.
Fangs of the pack are crueler than the snow;
Poor cur with frozen jowls, fear not my hand.

Poor cur, who cannot stop your shivering,
I know the wind bites when the belly's cold;
Poor cur, who cannot scent the coming Spring.

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME.—A batch of mail. Mostly friendly and flattering—there really are nice people in the world—some bawling me out, some asking questions. If you don't mind my not confessing the weaknesses for which I was bawled out, I'll spare you the letters of praise.

M. G. M. asks: No. It isn't Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. His first name is Martin: "Say, when are you going to do some traveling again? If you stay in Rome much longer you'll become a rusty Fascist."

Listen, Martin. At this writing Rome is bounded on the north by snow, on the west by freezing cold, on the east by storms and on the south by slush. Here we're getting a steady rain that I don't think will ever stop, but my room is warm. When you travel in Europe you need lire, kronen, francs, marks, kopecks, belgas, lewas, pesetas, drachmes, guilders, slotys, leus or dinars, and if you're an American you have to buy those gazoolums with dollars. I'd hate to be stuck somewhere between Zagreb and Kursumlija and learn that the dollar has been devaluated at twelve cents.

And don't fool yourself about the Fascists—they're not so rusty.

MRS. I. V. HARRIS of New York writes: "Some morning get up bright and early and be in the Piazza di Piedo Gardens about 7:15 o'clock and see Mussolini riding horseback." Lady, I wouldn't get up at 7:15 a. m. to see Mussolini riding a giraffe. If Mussolini wants to see a noble sight let him come to my place at 7:15 a. m. and watch me sleep. Mrs. Harris, say that at that hour I usually flop over on my stomach, with my head on one side and that my face is beautiful as a child's. Anyway, I can ride horseback myself if the horse doesn't go fast.

Thanks, Mrs. Harris, for your tips about Italian cities.

Give Them to a Circus

THIS one is more difficult. A lady has a husband and two daughters, fifteen and seventeen years old. She wants to work, although she doesn't specify what she wants to do. "My daughters no longer need me and there is nothing for me to do but mope around the house. Just because we have enough to live on my husband refuses to let me lead a decent, sane life. Sometimes I feel that I shall go out of my head." Well, please write something that will make her husband see reason? Why, certainly.

Put the two girls in a circus and travel around the country with them. Any girl of fifteen or seventeen who has an intelligent mother and does not need her is an interesting freak.

Dear lady, when you say that your daughters no longer need you, you simply slay me. The years between fifteen and twenty-one, in the life of a girl, are the critical, vital years that determine her qualities as a woman. A school can cram useless facts into her mind. Her father can direct her activities in the line of sports and athletics. From her companions she can be trusted to learn the slang, the badinage and the piffle of the day. But only anyone can teach her dancing, painting, dressmaking or knitting. But when it comes to the development of her qualities and the acquisition of charm—a woman's most valuable attributes—no one can take the place of a mother.

And, by the way, has hubby enough money to afford a fine chef? If not you might lead a very sane and decent life by making a study of cooking.

DIXIE W., "a very devoted follower," writes from Los Angeles, "You have no idea how much I envy you wandering about the way you do. I live a very quiet, uneventful life."

Oh, Dixie, if you only knew how much I envy you!

Question for Damrosch

MRS. GEORGE H. HUTTON of Santa Monica asks: "What is the matter with modern composers? Shall we shrug our shoulders and say they have no ideas, but write down notes and hope for the best? Or have these young musicians ideas which demand unusual expression but seem to denote a chaotic, disordered mind?"

Madam, I don't know what's the matter with them. I used to think they were harmless until they started to bother me. If ever I decide to commit a murder I shall first listen to a modern opera or symphony. It is sure to put me in the right mood.

But, madam, let me ask you one: What's the matter with modern painters, sculptors, and poets? Yes, and us scribblers. Why are we all turning out a lot of slush? Phidias, Michelangelo, Beethoven, Shakespeare, Keats would squirm in their graves could they behold the output of modern art. But they would admire our autos, our canning machines and our supersalesmen.

MICHAEL A. MATTHEWS of New York writes that after reading some of my articles last year he took a trip to Italy. Alas! I must be slipping. I'm not trying to get people to leave U. S. these days to travel aboard. In fact, I'm trying to keep them contented at home by giving them pictures of foreign attractions so clear and convincing that they have all the fun of traveling without getting seasick or paying hotel bills. And I haven't succeeded, unless—say, Mike, did you come over here just to see if I was telling the truth?

FASHION WINDS TOSS SILHOUETTES -:- SKIN GLEAMS WHITE FROM LEMON PACK

Ruffles That Billow in Back Revers Stand Out in Front ---All Are Windblown

By Victoria Gaines

(Authentic last-minute fashions from New York—the style center of America)

WINDBLOWN, WINDSWEPT, windtossed—all show which way the wind will blow in spring styles! Surely even the most unsuspecting soul knows that there is something in the wind this season! It's the "windblown silhouette"—a mode which might have more appropriately originated in our own Windy City than in breezeless Paris.

Briefly, it's the trick of looking as though your clothes were being whipped about you by the wind, forwards or backwards. If the ruffles on your frock or the revers on your coat stand out straight in front or you as though a strong breeze were blowing, that's the windblown silhouette; if the flounces on your evening frock flirt out behind you, that's the windblown silhouette, too, in reverse English.

SLENDER SILHOUETTE

The Big Idea behind all this is supposed to be the slenderizing effect it has on your figure. With all the doo-dads on your frock placed fore or aft, you can easily see how much slimmer you will look from side to side. And because it does succeed in narrowing down the seeming width of the figure, the windblown silhouette has taken the town by storm.

It was Schiaparelli's brainchild in the first place, in which with charming inconsistency, she contradicted her exaggeratedly square shoulders and stand-out sleeves of last season.

How to achieve this blown-about look is something every style-minded woman should know this spring. In frocks, it's fairly simple. All you do is slap a fluffy-ruffly frill down the front of your frock—and you're as windblown as a bird!

RIPPLING COLLARS

In coats, it's a bit more complicated. If the coat collar is of fur, it is flipped softly down the front in a single or double jabot style. If it is a collar of self-fabric, there are usually reinforced revers that stand out stiffly at the flick of your fingers.

In evening fashions, every well-trained skirt blows obediently backwards, together with its rigging of ruffles, flounces, frills and what-not.

As for accessories in the windblown manner, we have no Mercury-winged sandals as yet, and our bags and gloves have escaped the inflationary influence so far. But our spring hats have been swept to the back of our heads until they barely hold their own.

Halo hats, breezy sou'westers and piratically-brimmed affairs, usually with a light-colored facing next to the forehead, complete the windblown ensemble.

Curly Pates Make Chic Coiffures

A high-piled fringe of curls finishes the black swirl coiffure above. A spray of emerald green taffeta laurel leaves accents the arrangement.

The whole back of the head is a mass of soft ringlets in the arrangement above. It is banded by a wreath of velvet Parma violets.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

No matter how much they may diverge on ways and means, most of the well-known hairdressers in New York today are massing a woman's curls to one side, in a high diadem across the top of her head, or in a soft mass, off the neck, at the back of her head.

Chosen with care and knowledge, one of these arrangements is bound to make her head the best possible shape with what Nature has allotted her, and it so happens that once a good silhouette is achieved, a lot of extraneous ornamentation is permissible.

At the moment, a revival of flowers for coiffure is being touted. It's the spring in the air, which brings about an ecstasy of femininity and an inspiration to live up to the subtle, flowing gowns that are so fashionable.

The girl whose tresses are flat as a stream of water need not weep and hang her sleek head in dismay at her curly-headed sister's extravagant coiffures. She can take time off to get her hair curled by a permanent method, choosing among any number of processes, all masterly in the hands of an expert.

Among the newer types of permanent are those that are put in by steam, and those that use no overhead equipment whatever, merely winding a gal's hair Topsy fashion around a multitude of detached curlers busy with some secret fluid, and permitting her to wander around at will, dancing or doing anything else but stand on her head while the curl comes into being.

Once achieved, any good permanent can be patted and set into any pattern that a hairdresser judges will become his client, and Nature is outdone in her own field of beauty.

The curls in the coiffure above are piled coronet fashion across the top of the head. The cluster of pink daisies over one ear is youthful, vernal.

Tell Friends

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know whether or not it is proper to send out wedding announcements after the couple has been married secretly several months?

Gertrude.

There isn't any rule about this, and whether or not the announcements are sent out so late depends on circumstances and especially on the wish of the couple. If it isn't very many months after the ceremony has been performed, and if the majority of the relatives and friends do not know of the marriage, it usually is quite all right to send out the formal announcements. But if most of the relatives and friends already know of the marriage, this is an unnecessary gesture.

Many people meet this problem by writing notes announcing the news to their close friends . . . then the newer spreads quickly enough! Other people, instead of sending out announcements, give a reception formal or informal, in their new home. This party may be a tea, say on Sunday afternoon, or a housewarming, or a buffet luncheon or supper.

Tri-Color Stripes March South

Helen Rowland

By Annice Brink

This frock is designed with a wary eye toward action—the sleeves are loose and free, the back has inverted pleas, and the skirt, slim and straight in repose, has surprising width from an inverted pleat in front. The bow at the young collar and the belt are grosgrain.

Tri-colored in navy, red, green or brown, it is of a bemberg mixture that gives supple lines which sports clothes often lack to their own detriment, and also gives superlative wear. The frock is to be seen in a Boston shop, the location of which you may learn by phoning Annice Brink at LIBerty 4000, or writing her, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, Boston Evening American.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Any woman over 20 knows what type of man she wants to marry. But every day I am more and more convinced that NOMAN knows what sort of woman he wants—until he's married the other sort.

Two interesting letters lie before me. In them a man from the south and a man from the north describe the Idea! Girl.

"The women I meet," declares one man, "do not have that vivifying, vitalizing, radiant vision of 'Love-in-the-sky.' The woman I visualize and could love would be a superlative brunette—dusky eyes, teeth like pearls, lips like roses, tapering arms and a slender vibrant figure. Good-looking, fast-stepping, hard-working, soft-hearted, submissive, consistent, productive, aggressive, magnetic, energetic, progressive and INOFFENSIVE."

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

Will you please tell me what is the most effective way to propose marriage? This may seem to you to be a silly request but from one of my inexperience and naturally timidity it is the most natural of queries. "Will you be mine?" sounds too much like I cribbed it from a St. Valentine's Day missive.

"Will you marry me?" is altogether too abrupt. I want something that "says it" with charm and sincerity—a phrase replete with genuine sentiment and love.

Can you help me, Pandora?

JONATHAN.

DEAR JONATHAN:

Why don't you just try telling that girl of yours that you love her and want to marry her?

I had a beau once who was a theatrical press agent and out of the blue and in the midst of the most casual discussion of this and that, he'd blurt out a pedantic speech about love that had nothing whatever to do with us. An obviously memorized set piece, I discovered that he'd "learn by heart" all the hero's "sides" of dialogue having to do with love, etcetera, from the shows he publicized. He was really a rather charming person—any girl's fancy, as they used to say when grandma was a girl—but his "canned" love avowals chilled me completely.

So, Jonathan, if you'd take a tip from old lady experience, say it from the heart and that will "say everything" to your little queen's taste. Endless luck to you!

PANDORA.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Lovely Lashes

Question: I always admire movie stars' lovely lashes, but unfortunately mine are thin and not very long. How can I make them grow thick, curly and long? Would cutting help? I have gotten many helpful hints from your articles, and hope you'll give me some good advice about my own beauty problem. Thank you.—Miss B. G., Boston.

Answer: If you'll apply a small quantity of vaseline to your lashes every night with a tiny eyebrow brush, brushing upward, it will help to promote their growth. At the same time it will train them to curl upward. Cutting the lashes makes them short and stubby looking, and doesn't have any effect on their growth. You forgot to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply, but if you'll send it along I'll give you some other suggestions about homemade lash growers.

Lemon Rinses

Question: I've heard that lemon juice is excellent for brunettes who are troubled with scalp, is that true, or should only blondes indulge in lemon rinses?—Mrs. Y. M., Waltham.

Answer: While lemon rinses are used by blondes who want to give a golden glint to their hair, lemon rinses also are excellent for brunnettes who are troubled with excessive oiliness that sleeks down the hair and makes it look stringy and "languid" a few days after shampooing.

Pretty Arms

Question: I am troubled with gooseflesh on my arms. Can you suggest some remedy for this? I'd appreciate it so much, as I'm planning to go to a formal party in a few weeks—and really am very ashamed of the way my upper arms look. Please answer in the paper. I'll be watching for your reply.—T. D. D., Quincy.

Answer: Why not try a salt glow treatment for gooseflesh on your arms. Moisten a panful of ordinary table salt, rub gently over your arms and then turn on a spray of tepid water, cooling it gradually. Dry carefully and massage a good cold cream into your arms. When you take your daily bath, don't forget to scrub the afflicted area with plenty of warm water and soap and use your complexion brush or a rough washcloth. This will stimulate your circulation, and gradually the "gooseflesh" will disappear, leaving your arms soft and pretty. This condition of your skin took some time to develop, so don't expect miraculous results over night.

Two New Means to Freshness and Beauty

By Carol Ames

AS I READ the flood of letters that come to my desk each day I often think how nice it would be if I had a magic wand to wave and a few mysterious words which would make you all as lovely and alluring as you could wish . . . in the twinkling of an eye. Charm and beauty for all of you is what I'll wish for if I ever find Aladdin's magic lamp!

But, seriously, this eternal quest for beauty isn't as easily ended as all that, so I'm always particularly glad to pass on such pleasant news as I have for you today.

Fragrant facial and beauty packs. What a soothing, rejuvenating, restful effect they have on our complexions—and dispositions. A few such treatments at home with the right creams . . . or at a beauty salon, if you'd prefer . . . gently refresh and revive weary skins, and send the blood dancing merrily on its way.

Look closely at the next lovely clear complexion you see. The muscles and tissues are firm and pliant, with the blood circulating freely to renew the worn out tissues.

Stimulating exercise for the face and neck may be obtained by applying the proper creams and lotions with a smart, rapid patting motion which leaves the blood tingling without stretching the skin.

There is a marvelous lemon bleaching pack which reduces large pores, eliminates blackheads and gently bleaches tanned or freckled skins. This cream is soft and milky white, and has a delicious lemon fragrance which tempts you to eat it instead of using it on your skin! It should be applied evenly and smoothly to the skin, and removed with a warm, wet cloth when dry. You can use this excellent cream at home, or have it done for you by a skillful-fingered operator.

For my second bit of good news—a wonderful glandular rejuvenating skin treatment designed to restore muscle firmness, banish lines, wrinkles and correct skin disorders like whiteheads and enlarged pores. These treatments are especially helpful to older women, but are equally good to prevent premature aging of the skin. It's nice to have the first treatment or series of them given at a restful, attractive beauty parlor where found—or you can take the complete treatment yourself.

Wouldn't you like to know where you can purchase either of these grand beautifying creams in Boston, or have the facial treatments mentioned above? Just telephone to Carol Ames, Boston Evening American (the number is LIB. 4000). Or if you prefer writing, send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

LITTLE PIGS IN BLANKETS CANAPE

Slice white bread and cut in rounds. Cover each round with chopped American cheese and sprinkle with salt, red pepper and mustard. Wrap an oyster in a piece of bacon, fasten together with a toothpick and lay on center of round. Put under broiler or in oven, and when done the bacon will be cooked, the oyster plump and the cheese melted. The fat from the bacon will have sizzled through the cheese and into the bread, which has toasted in the meantime. Remove from oven and place one or two slices of stuffed olives on cheese part or cover cheese with the sliced stuffed olives. Paprika may be substituted for the red pepper.

CALVES' LIVER ITALIENNE

1½ lbs. liver
1 tbsp. olive oil
3 onions, thinly sliced
½ cup mushrooms
2 tsps. chopped parsley
6 slices bacon
Salt and pepper
¾ cup white wine

Slice the liver little less than ¾ inch. Cover with boiling water and allow to stand for 5 minutes so that the blood may be drawn out and the flavor may be less strong. Drain and remove the veins and outside membranes. Grease the bottom of a baking dish with the olive oil, and lay in half of the sliced liver. Sprinkle with onions, mushrooms and parsley and seasoning. Add the remaining liver, and on top the sliced bacon. Pour in the wine, cover and cook in a slow oven until the meat is tender. Remove the cover during the last few minutes of baking to brown the bacon.

HALF-WAY MARK NEAR IN DRIVE FOR FUNDS

Goal	$4,500,000
To Date	2,258,163.30
Still Needed	2,241,836.70
Days To Go	16

With approximately two more weeks to go, the Emergency Campaign was speeded up today as workers expressed confidence of reaching the goal of $4,500,000 on time.

Reports coming in from the various divisions during the next week are expected to show a large increase in donations, as many business houses have not yet been canvassed.

Officials and workers of the drive were cheered by receipt of two subscriptions which were made at sea on the North German Lloyd liner Europa and wirelessed to this city.

One was from Raymond H. Thayer of Wellesley, member of a Boston leather firm, who contributed $200.

The other was a donation of 20 marks, the equivalent of $7.75, by the smoking room steward of the liner Carl Dhonoheim, in memory of wartime kindnesses in this city.

Dhoneholm was a member of the crew of the ill-fated German Kronprincessin Cecile, driven into Bar Harbor by British cruisers as she attempted to reach Germany with a cargo of gold, and later interned at East Boston.

The donations on the Europa apparently inspired by a news bulletin in the liner's daily paper, were made known in a radiogram to Christopher de Groot, general agent of the North German Lloyd here.

It read: "Boston first class passenger Raymond H. Thayer requests immediately to transmit $200 through you to Farley, chairman Emergency Campaign, Smoking Room Steward Carl Dhoneholm, interned on North German Lloyd 'Kronprincessin Cecile' in Boston during war overheard conversation and adds 20 marks to donation in gratitude for kindness Boston welfare agencies during after period internment. (Signed) Dachne, Commander, 'Europa.'"

"LOVE" TOPIC OF SERMON

"Love" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 4.

The Golden Text is: "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life" (Jude 1:21).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine Love, which made harmless the poisonous viper, which delivered men from the boiling oil, from the fiery furnace, from the jaws of the lion, can heal the sick in every age and triumph over sin and death. It crowned the demonstrations of Jesus with unsurpassed power and love."

500 COUPLES AT EDISON FETE

Marking the resumption of a series of occasions halted by the depression two years ago, 500 couples danced last night through the annual ball of the Edison Employees' Club at the Hotel Somerset.

The affair, staged for the benefit of the Emergency Planning and Research Bureau of Boston, was attended by several officials of the Edison Company and scores of persons associated in allied industries of the electrical business.

Among those who were present at the gala affair were Ralph F. Lincoln, president of the club; Sidney Hosmer, vice president and general manager of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., Leavitt L. Edgar, a vice president and several others.

Ready to Cheer 'X-9' Thriller

Boys and girls of the Boston Evening American's Secret Agent X-9 Club were on hand early today at the Fenway Theater, Massachusetts ave. and Boylston st., where they were guests at the showing of "Four Frightened People." They showed their enjoyment by applause and cheers. (Boston American photo.)

SECRET AGENTS JAM THEATER

Well—it was a great day and great fun and the boys and girls of the "Secret Agent X-9" Club had the time of their lives at the Fenway Theater

Small boys and girls and large boys and girls, fat ones and thin ones, but all laughing and all wearing their flashing "Secret Agent X-9" badges and with their mothers' stockings or blouses jammed the Fenway Theater this morning.

They were guests of "Secret Agent X-9" whose adventures are being depicted in the newest comic strip in the Boston Evening American, and were guests also of the theater management

And what a time they had at the first "Secret Agent X-9" club party for the members. They saw the exciting talkie, "4 Frightened People" with Claudia Colbert, Herbert Marshall and Mary Boland, and they saw also another picture, "Eyes to Love," with Adolphe Menjou, Genevieve Tobin, Hugh Herbert and Guy Kibbee

For those who have not yet joined the "Secret Agent X-9" club there is still time to enroll. Turn to the comic page of today's Boston Evening American, read the adventures of the wily detective and then clip the coupon, fill it out and send it to "Secret Agent X-9" care of the Boston Evening American. Your badge and card will be sent you.

Body of R. I. Sea Victim Identified

Westerly, R I, Feb. 2 (AP)—The body of a man washed ashore at Quonochontaug Thursday, was identified today as that of Wesley H. Fletcher, of Hamburg, N. Y.

Identification was made by his father, Charles R. Fletcher, who said his son had suffered business reverses and had been in poor health lately. State police declared there was nothing to indicate foul play.

Highlights of Night Life

By SHELDON FISHER

One of Boston's brightest lights to shine soon is Lovaggi's. A new hotel now under $200,000 construction, located on Mass. ave. opposite the State Theater. Night goers are going to be impressed with the Dine and Dance Salon of the hotel and especially the ladies with skilled beauticians to help with the "primping" in the ladies' lounge. Opening around the middle of March with Bert Lowe providing the music will probably mean another success for John Lovaggi of Show Boat fame.

John J. Finan

Debbies of the other two big cities contested the football attraction to be cocktails. What competition the grid heroes will meet now with legal liquor in.

Theatrical guest night every Tuesday eve. at the Cocoanut Grove is just that — what with Doris Kenyon and Buddy Rogers leading public eyefulls there lately Angelo Lippi of this Piedmont st. club announced a new show of Broadway favorites taking the floor for a week starting Monday night, with Baritone Ramy Weeks waving the baton.

"4 Frightened People," new film at the Paramount and Fenway, according to the N. Y. "Mag" critics, is well worth admission

The Everglades, at the Westminster boasts the town's oldest bartender in the form of John J Finan, with 39 years' experience at mixing them.

Two charity events soon at the Statler—the Supper Dance of the Bikur Cholim Hospital in the Salle Modern Monday night, the 5th, and the Hotel Greeters ball in the large ballroom, Feb. 16—with 4000 people expected, benefiting the National Home for Hotel Workers These constant charities must mean we're a civilized people at that.

The three charming young ladies singing in trio form at the Beaux Wick Egyptian Room every Friday and Saturday night are none other than society's Nancy Whitman, Nancy Nelson and Mimmie Parks, now with Jack Francis' music. And Lem Prior's Village Inn, now in its infancy of two weeks serves a nightly throng of eager patrons.

According to reports, the Broadway, formerly the "Mayfair," is enjoying visits from their old patrons

KNIGHTS ISSUE BALL APPEAL

Leaders in civic and business circles of the city will join with athletes next Monday night at the Copley Plaza Hotel at the annual charity ball of Pere Marquette Council, K of C

Proceeds will be used to aid destitute families of members of the council and also to help in the support of the Columbus Day Nursery of South Boston.

Spurred by the knowledge that the charity fund has been depleted by demands during the past year, a committee headed by Deputy Grand Knight Martin J. Connolly, has made plans that this year's affair will be the largest in council history

An appeal has been issued by Grand Knight James F. Daly that all, who can do so, contribute to the success of the event

Invited guests include all state officers of the Knights of Columbus as well as Gov. Fly, Mayor Mansfield, Dist.-Atty. Foley and many other public figures.

WHITE WORKERS MAKE MERRY

With nearly 500 couples, including all executives of the organization, the annual dance of the R. H. White Company Store Members' Association was held last night in the Chamber of Commerce ballroom

The affair which lasted until an early hour this morning, opened with a grand march which was led by Harold W. Humphrey, president of the association, and Mrs. Humphrey.

Those who attended included Benjamin F. Raphael, president of the company; Matthew J. Dunphy, vice-president; Arthur Kelly, treasurer and other officials.

1000 BACK AT WORK AS STRIKE NEARS END

Officials of the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union and President John H. Goldberg of the Gold Seal Shoe Co. will meet today in an effort to reach an agreement of the wage dispute which has kept teh factory closed and 1000 employes out of work since last Monday.

Committees selected by the workers and the joint council of the union have been working on a new proposition for the past two days and they feel that it will be possible to settle the trouble today.

An offer to leave prices to arbitration was rejected by thef irm and the union rejected an offer by the concern to pay June 19 state board prices on a shoe that sells for $3, plus the 3 0per cent granted by the Perkins pact.

It is claimed b the union officials that the firm is making a $4 seller and it would mean a 12½ per cent cut if the worwers accepted the $3 price.

Back to Heartless War Days

Back to the shellswept battle field at Chateau Thierry in France went the thoughts of Mrs. Clara M. Hurd, Gold Star mother of Jenness st., Lynn, last night as she broadcast her views of the Floyd Gibbons war pictures being published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Her son, then only 17 years of age, was killed in the drive at Chateau Thierry. Mrs. Hurd has visited his grave. (Boston American photo.)

Martin Fights Reduction in N. E. Dairy Herds

New England farmers have already cut milk production to meet demand, Cong. Joseph W. Martin of Nouth Attleboro declared in Washington today, in opposition to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's program to reduce milk production by 15 per cent.

Cong. Martin said he was acting for farmers of Bristol and Norfolk counties who had reduced their herds while the country generally, and the North Central States particularly, had shown an increase.

Further reduction in New England would lead to a shortage in certain months, Cong. Martin said, and this might have to be met by importing milk from other areas. Higher prices would result.

Representatives of two producers' associations refused further negotiations with the AAA today.

Washington dispatches report the United Farmers and the Bellows Falls co-operatives definitely broken with the AAA and their representatives en route to their homes.

The break came, it was said, when the AAA attempted to force through a plan which would automatically put all New England farmers on an equal basis in regard to their sales of milk in Greater Boston.

Meanwhile efforts of Ralph W. Robart director of the State division of the necessaries of life received a setback when local producers deserted his guarantee of a stabilized milk price could not protect them as could federal control.

Still another statement made by Robart was seen as an indirect threat or warning to those who refuse to step into line. This contained a brief "tip" that milk can be sold by at least one organization lower than the 10 cent standard. Robart said:

"No attempt was made by me to set prices. From the operating costs, stores found they could sell milk for 10 cents at "cash and carry" prices. There is at least one outlet which could sell milk cheaper than 10 cents per quart profitably, but by doing so it would be taking an unfair advantage of the market and for the present it is not constrained to do so."

WAR PICTURES TRUE TO GOLD STAR MOTHER

Only the swift quaver in her voice betrayed that the woman at the microphone was a Gold Star mother, speaking of her freckle-faced son of 17 who was killed at Chateau Thierry in 1918.

Mrs. Clara M Hurd, buxom and motherly, now living at 33 Jenness st., Lynn was the guest speaker last night on the Gold Star Mother program of Stations WHZ-WBZA

Arthur, her son, would have been 18 if he had lived a month. But German shrapnel fire swept over him.

He's buried 50 yards from the Chateau Thierry line

It was part of the Boston Sunday Advertiser campaign to get the message of Floyd Gibbons' war pictures into more American homes.

The pictures have been running in the Boston Sunday Advertiser for two weeks. Five more pages will appear tomorrow

Gibbons is anti-war And anti-pacifist. So is Mrs. Hurd.

"I am against this hideous carnage," Mrs. Hurd told her unseen audience.

"I'm against entangling alliances, too. Some of these Gibbons pictures are pretty hard for a Gold Star mother to look at, but I've seen other war pictures, and they are true."

After she concluded, her self-control was succeeded by the quiet tones of Margaret Bevin, a professional

She portrayed the Gold Star Mother in a sketch based on Robert W. Service's poem, "Young Fellow My Lad."

And her interpretation was good. In fact, almost excellent. But she didn't put the lines over like Mrs. Hurd. She is young and life is ahead of her. And a bit of Clara Hurd's heart is buried back of the Chateau-Thierry line

The program last night was arranged by Newcomb F. Thompson, radio editor of the Boston Evening American.

STATE ST. FIRE UNDER PROBE

Police and fire officials continued their probe today into the origin of the two-alarm fire, which swept through two floors of a six-story building before being brought under control yesterday afternoon.

The building adjoins a structure in which there was another fire last week and officials are inclined to the theory that both blazes may have been of incendiary origin.

The building was unoccupied at the time of the fire. The first floor was occupied by the box factory of Frederick Lochiatto and the five other floors are vacant. Most of Lochiatto's business is done during the early morning hours with marketmen.

The Collins Boys Recall the Glory That Was Yesterday

Eddie and Shono Tell of Barnstorming Adventures in Old Day

By AUSTEN LAKE

IT is a sound for sore ears to hear old baseball chums like the Collins boys, Eddie of the Red Sox and Shono of the Dedham sq. Kaffee Klatch, get together in the common room at Fenway Park and go to brooding on the swift, inexorable advance of their years. There they sit, like a pair of gnarled gnomes, sipping cool drafts from the press bar pump and nibbling the rinds of an ice box lunch. For of all our sports, baseball alone induces a faint aura of longing and a sentimental unease that sets veterans to reproducing half forgotten scenes and retelling old nonsense.

"And do you mind," says Shono, the parenthetical lines on either side of his flatiron jaw deepening, "Do you mind the exhibition we played at Enid, Okla.?"

"Twas the spring o' eighteen," mused Eddie, strumming his wide ears, as is his habit when musing. "And we dressed in the fire house."

And the two old cronies, fellows in a hundred old adventures reviewed the tale that was familiar to both, of the time that the 1918 White Sox, stopped off in the springtime to play for a silver collection on the spine of some Western mountain, where outfield drives trickled on into the pleasant valleys beneath, to become treasured souvenirs of some rustic lad. And Eddie told how some lusty fire laddie, the elastic gone from his pants and socks furled over his ankles, had spanked a long roller that lodged under a little barn, sitting on brick stilts in deep center field. And how Shono had scrambled underneath to the astonishment of a Noah's Ark of farm beasts, so that chickens, pigs, turkeys and ducks had exploded from four sides of the barn, spraying Shono with feathers, egg shells and bird lime, while scrambling out in a fury of squawking and squealing.

"Twas like an animated cartoon," said Eddie, giving his bubbling giggle that rose in soft, liquid huh-huhs like the sound of a farm pump.

The Decaying Tradition of Baseball

THESE old yarns, plucked from the dear dead past, deal with a horde of vanished heroes and bring whiffs of melancholy like smouldering leaves in late fall, or the scent of rosemary and lavender, so that the Collins boys go to mourning on ephemeral youth and the sweet burgeoning of age. And I fear that these good old times are gone to come no more, because baseball folk no longer beat through the corn belt, the canebrake or the mud puddle towns to pick up silver collections, in the spring, and now roll home from training in ther palace Pullmans, halting only where big city fathers offer large cash inducements, posted in advance.

It is too bad, for the quaint traditions of the major leagues are suffering and the game's literature is losing much of its rugged individualism. No more will we be welcomed in some barefoot hamlet by the sheriff and hear his he-man, howdy-brother hail at the town depot, while native yokels swivel their necks without moving away from the sun. It was a treat, too, to be installed in some pitcher and bowl hotel room, which smelled of a dozen mysterious odors, while a grizzled bell hop let in a shaft of sunlight that cut the murky gloom like a remorseful stab in an uneasy conscience. And then, as the players dressed in the jail house, the manager and heavy hitter of the parish team would come into the cordial atmosphere and fumble a few well-chosen words.

And once in a little cotton-blossom village named Oopeechee or Oochigoochee, I disremember, the Braves were playing a yokel set while a swarm of farm urchins, several thousand strong, gave up shrill, calliope cheers that would bounce for hours among the hills. For they said that a man's shout in that region never really dies, but goes on through eternity echoing among the dells, so that, if your ears were sharp, you might still catch the record of old, colonial Indian massacres and the shriek of the victims.

Fournier Hit Bullseye

WELL, Jacques Fournier had walked out that day and drawn a circle in the infield dust with his bat handle, telling the parish third baseman, who was a strapping lad with a shaggy mop of black hair, "I'm going to bunt the next pitch right into that ring." The lad had grinned a disbelieving grin and said, "Yo' sho' foolin', mistah." Yet Jake, true to his promise, had nudged the next ball, which trickled down the base line to stop near the middle of the circle, while the parish lad stood frozen stiff by the miracle, unable to move.

"I couldn't do it again in a thousand years," Fournier had confessed later.

Those were happy, goofy days in sunny Dixie, and it is a pity that they had to come to an end. But the disillusioned hamlets of the South are only equalled by the disillusionment of the ball clubs, many of which have had to mortgage their properties and tap their insurance policies for cash to keep their players in a life of Oriental luxury. The little horse and buggy leagues of the South have passed too, dispersing their players, who last year were walking the rail ties with uniform rolls in one hand and a pet bat in the other, sleeping in haystacks and peddling their services for bed, board and cigarette money.

The last of the great barnstorming teams was the Yankees of 1929, who played the honkytonks along the Gulf to Texas and back through Arkansas and the weed country of the Middle West, anul the players, jaded and footsore, landed in New York, with only a fuzzy taste for the campaign just ahead. They picked up enough loose cash to pay Babe Ruth's salary but they were knocked out of a pennant and several hundred thousands in World Series boodle.

I don't know what two old baseball chums, like the Collins boys, will have to talk about in the years to come when the present generation of young business athletes will have grown up. Because there will be no barnstorming adventures to soothe their gathering age and no sweetly solemn memories to bring whiffs of smouldering leaves, rosemary and lavender.

Face Off at 8.30 p. m.

By BILL GRIMES

For more than a fortnight, the Bruins Cubs have been battling to protect or regain the lead in the Canadian-American League. Tonight, their objective will be to dissolve a first-place tie with the Quebec Beavers, by taking a fall out of the Philadelphia Arrows at the Boston Garden.

The Can-Am race is one of the most bitter in years. After almost every game, the leading contenders change positions. The Beavers and Providence have been pressing the Cubs for weeks and the Arrows are only a game and a half out of the select circle

Lionel Hitchman will make his first appearance at the Garden as manager of the Cubs. He was sent to succeed Myles Lane early this week and has a tie game with the Arrows to his credit.

Although he was to have been a bench manager, "Hitch" will be in action tonight for his club is short handed, through the absence of Tommy Filmore and Ole Hexiner.

He will start on the defense with Bert McInenly, with Joe Jerwa and Joe Bretto as the relief rear guards.

Since their return from Philadelphia, the Cubs have been resting up. They have been through a six game grind, four of which were played away from home, during which they relinquished their lead to Quebec for two days, went out in front again by beating New Haven and are now back in a first place deadlock with the Beavers.

Besides Manager Hitchman the Cubs will show three new faces tonight. George Patterson and Lloyd Gross, who figured in the Chapman-Gracie deal, are now with the junior varsity, as is Joe Bretto, the giant ex-amateur from mid-West.

Manager Hitchman plans to open up with a front line composed of Happy Harnott, at left wing, Don Smillie, center and Sheldon Buckles, right wing. Until "Hitch" took charge, this line was played as the first relief trio, but proved to be a strong unit as well as a scoring asset

Patterson and Gross will team with Milt Halliday and Bill Cunningham and Connie Weir will be the spare forwards.

The Arrows are only three points back of Providence and a victory over the Cubs would put Herbie Gardiner's charges in the running, for they are coming fast and will be serious contenders before the wind up of the Can-Am season

PERRY REPEATS OVER CRAWFORD

Adelaide, South Australia, Feb. 3 (AP)—Frederick J. Perry, English Davis up star and United States singles tennis champion, kept up his run of victories over Jack Crawford today, beating the Australian star in a two-set match 6-4, 6-2.

Perry won the final of the Australian championship from Crawford at Sydney, January 27

Today's was the fifth meting between the world's two ranking amateurs here and the fourth victory for Perry

Crawford defeated Perry December 2 in an Australian-English series which Australia won, 9 to 3 to three.

Snow Drifts Fail to Halt Marathon Aspirants

Here it is the dead of winter and already Marathon pluggers are tying plans for the B. A. A. 26-mile grind on April 19th.

A group of 15 marathoners headed by Johnny Semple of Lynn, Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, Jimmy Henigan of Medford, and Jimmy Kelly of Arlington, all top-notchers, have made arrangements with Tom Kenny manager of the event, to hold a preliminary run over the first route from Hopkinton on Feb 22

They will make no attempt to race but will be content to step along at a brisk pace. Semple feels that the practice run will tune the plodders for the later classic.

Battle in Air

A wild battle in the air is fought by Lieut. Cushman and Lieut. Carlson, Cossack aces, as they thunder after the ball in practicing for a strenuous fray at the Commonwealth Armory. An aerial battle, with both horses' four hoofs off the ground. E[illegible] ice air [illegible] and the game [illegible] one of the most thrilling sports spectacles. A doubleheader at the Armory tonight is billed. There'll be hard riding and a tight tilt, in each match. (Boston American photo.)

TWIN POLO BILL AT ARMORY

Polo enthusiasts watch one of the best indoor double bills of the year tonight at the Commonwealth Armory. The unbeaten Candlewood trio meets Harvard varsity in one game, while undefeated 110th Cavalry, meets Medford in the prelim.

Lou Smith in Flying Trip to Boston

Lou Smith, general manager of the Rockingham race track paid a flying visit to Boston, and in a conversation with newspapermen predicted that the State of New Hampshire would receive nearly $500,000 as its share of the [illegible] take this summer at R[illegible]

However, a break in the weather would be needed to reach this figure, which is about $[illegible] more than was received by the Granite State at the 1933 meeting, informed Mr. Smith.

The successful season last summer at the Salem track, large attendance, sizeable purses, and the fact that $12,000,000 was wagered has been the talk of racing centers all over the country. With the result the best stables are planning to head for Rockingham

June 30 to Sept. 8 are the [illegible] dates set for the [illegible] says two days of extending racing [illegible] All that is needed is the official confirmation of Gov. John Winant

The American totalizer which expedites the handling of bets will be installed for the 1934 meeting.

The report of the state racing commission was in the hands of Gov. Winant today, according to Chairman Ralph W. Davis of Manchester. It contains the commission's report on last year's meet [illegible] as information regarding [illegible] statewide move to prevent [illegible] of horses. Davis and a [illegible]-member of the board, Ralph [illegible] attended the convention of racing commissioners held at Miami [illegible] weeks ago.

After a short visit here and in New York, Smith plans to fly back to Houston, Texas.

Ickes' Son Makes Wrestling Debut

Chicago, Feb 3 (US)—Raymond Ickes, son of the Secretary of the Interior will make his debut as a collegiate wrestler for the University of Chicago tonight against the University of Iowa squad. Ickes is in the 135-pound class

He recently suffered a broken nose in a hockey game. His father was formerly an athlete at the same university

RINDGE BOWS TO STONEHAM IN LEAGUE BATTLE

Harvey Bennett, Stoneham High right defense star, was knocked unconscious in a scrimmage and carried from the ice this afternoon at the Boston Garden as his team scored a 2 to 1 victory over Rindge Tech. Th[illegible]e game was a thrilling class of the Greater Boston Interscholastic League card.

Bennett regained consciousness some minutes later, in the dressing room. The game was one of the closest of the season at the Garden and in the course of a scrimmage near his own goal, Bennett was struck on the head. He fell to the ice and was carried out.

A brain concussion was at first feared, but later indications were that Bennett would recover completely within a few hours.

In another game of the Garden program Arlington High's sextet swept to a 2 to 0 conquest of Belmont High.

Two upsets were scored in the Bay State Hockey League card at the Arena, where Framingham held a favored Wellesley team to a scoreless tie, and Needham deadlocked the league-leading Walpole six, 3 to 3.

RED SOX TO START SOUTH NEXT MONTH WITH 11 NEW PLAYERS

22 ON BRAVES' ROSTER ALL VETERANS

By JOE CASHMAN

Braves and Red Sox ran a dead heat in issuing their 1934 rosters. Each arrived in the same mail.

The Fenway folder, white with a red border and featuring an architect's conception of the new park on the cover, lists 27 players.

The Tribal pamphlet, colored the customary brown and offering an Indian's head as the touch of art, has but 22 active performers named therein.

Nineteen players are new to the Sox roster, 11 of them having been acquired since the close of the last season. Only Bob Weiland, Dusty Rhodes, Henry Johnson, Roy Johnson, Dale Alexander, Johnny Welch and Bob Seeds remain of the squad that opened the '33 campaign under Marty McManus. Weiland is the lone survivor of the training trip to Savannah in 1932

22 ON PAYROLL

Sixteen of the Warriors went to St. Pete last spring and all 22 were on Judge Fuchs' payroll last fall. Pinky Whitney, Hal Lee, Bobby Smith, Ray Starr, Joe Mowry and Tommy Thompson arrived during the course of the race.

There is a difference of but three months in the average ages of the two Boston squads, the figures being 28 years 6 months for the Sox and 28 years 9 months for the Tribesmen.

The Braves have two Greater Boston representatives in Bobby Brown of Hull and Frank Horgan of Somerville. Arthur "Skinny" Graham, rookie outfielder from Somerville, is the sole local light on the Sox.

Graham, 22 years old, is also the infant of the Fenway flock. Herb Pennock and Joe Judge are the oldest of Bucky Harris' charges, each being 38.

Bob Weiland towers over all his mates from a height of 6 04, but he is five pounds lighter than Dale Alexander, who, at 210, is the heavyweight of the gang.

No less than 16 of the Sox are six feet or taller and these include all the hurlers, except Fred "Lefty" Ostermueller, Rochester product, who fails to qualify by just a half inch.

RABBIT BRAVES' DADDY

The inimitable Walter James Vincent Maranville, about to enter upon his 23rd season in the majors, is the daddy of the Braves, of course. The Rabbit celebrated his 42nd birthday last Armistice Day.

Dick Gyselman, utility infielder in the Wigwam baby by a margin of six days. He'll be 22 April 6. Bobby Brown will be the same age on April Fool.

The Gyselman and Wally Berger look down on their mates from a height of 6.02, while "Shanty" Hogan, at 225 pounds, is 29 pounds heavier than his nearest rival.

The records show that the new Sox pitchers won 56 and lost 82 games last season. Grove won 24 and lost 8, Ostermueller won 9 and lost 7, Pennock won 7 and lost 4, and Walberg won 9 and lost 13.

Skinny Graham had the best batting mark of the newcomers, hitting .375 at Woonsocket. Julius Solters turned in a .351 average at Baltimore, and Gordon Hinkle set a .326 pace at Rochester. Eddie Morgan hit well over .300 at New Orleans, but he is down for .264, his Cleveland mark. Max Bishop, Bill Cissell and Carl Reynolds, the other recent acquisitions, bring batting marks of .294, .230 and .286 respectively.

BRAVES UNDER LIMIT

The two squads are among the smallest to be taken South in many years. The Braves are already one under the player limit which goes into effect May 15, while the Sox are only two over. If Joe Judge is listed as a scout

Cubs' Cage Guardian Holds Fort Against Arrows

Smiling with joy at the prospect of a coming barrage of pucks, Goalie Percy Jackson of the Bruin Cubs sets himself for the Garden game of tonight with the Philadelphia Arrows. The Cubs are tie in the Can-Am parade. The Arrows and other teams are making the race hot. Jackson will need to be at his best tonight. If the Cubs are to maintain their advantage.

SEVEN TITLES AT STAKE IN MEET AT 'Y' GYM

Boston won't go without its weekly track feature tonight in spite of the Millrose games in New York. The Boston Y. M. C. A. is staging a championship meet of its own at the Huntington Ave. gym, with seven New England titles at stake

More than 200 entries have been received, thus making the largest list in the 14-year history of the games

Dean Woolsey, former University of Illinois middle distance star, by his last-minute entry, adds lustre to an already attractive card

Woolsey who is getting into condition for the Hunter mile at the B. A. A. games, is to race in the 1000 meter New England championship. He is a student at Harvard Medical School and is running under the colors of the B. A. A.

FROSH RELAY FEATURE

Among the several attractive relays are those between Boston University and New Hampshire, Boston College freshman, vs. Northeastern freshmen, Boston Y Team B, vs. Lawrence Y, and Boston Y Team A. vs. Lynn Y.

Special interest is attached to the shotput in which Tony Geniewicz, former Lynn English and Clark School star and now enrolled at Dartmouth will be pitted against Dinny Zaitz, former Regimental champion at Boston English and outstanding weight man at Boston College

This pair are said to be headed towards intercollegiate shotput honors. Tonight's event which starts promptly at 7.30 p. m., will afford them their first oportunity for 1934 competition.

HALL LOST TO SQUAD

Bloom hit the Terrier track squad today. Godfrey Hall, star dashman and 300-yarder, was placed on academic probation at the Boston University college of business administration, automatically removing Hall from all activities.

A freshman last year in the evening division and former Somerville high athlete, Hall was chosen by Win Marling, Terrier track mentor, to be the best prospect of the year.

Eleven men will compete tonight; 60-meter dash, Jack Seltzer, Bob Pollack, Fred Franklin, Bob Bolivar; 300-yard handicap Leo Keenow, Louis Chase, Capt Eddie Parthum, Franklin, and Bolivar; high jump, Johnny Grist, 16-pound shot, Max Fogleman and Charlie Gubellini; relay with Tufts (tentative), Horris Foster Louis Chase, Ed Parthum, and Jessie Chase.

HORSEMEN IN COMPROMISE

New Orleans, Feb 3 (AP) — Threats of horsemen at the Fair Grounds to withdraw their stables in protest over a cut in minimum purses from $400 to $300 was settled by compromise today at a meeting of horsemen at the track

The horsemen accepted the proposal of Joseph A. Murphy, general manager, for $300 purchases to run until the expiration on February 10 of the present condition book, but after that date the $400 purse would be restored.

At the meeting, agreement also was reached for two cheap horse sales and, with claiming prices from $600 to $800

The horsemen also requested that two veterinarians be employed to take saliva tests of horses to prevent the use of narcotics on horses before the races

After the meeting the secretary's office was filled with horsemen anxious to get their horses in the programs.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

During his 10 seasons with the Bruins, Lionel Hitchman made thousands of friends among the hockey fans and his sealots will be out in large numbers tonight when he makes his home debut as manager of the Cubs against the Philadelphia Arrows at the Garden.

Since Joe Bretto joined the Bruins two weeks ago in Toronto, the fans have heard numerous pro and con reports as to his ability. They will have an opportunity to look this giant ex-amateur over tonight, for he will be in the Cub line up against the Arrows.

If Joe Jerwa is not in the starting line up, he will sure step on the gas when he gets a chance to display his wares. Joe has been rated as a first stringer ever since he joined the Cubs and he will bear down to show cause why he should not be returned to his regular left defense berth.

Manager Herbie Gardiner is still confident that his Arrows will reach the playoffs. A year ago, Manager Gardiner had one of the best balanced minor league teams in the annals of the Can-Am League but he was beaten out for the Fountain Cup by Buck Boucher's Cubs, after a wild battle in Philadelphia.

Eddie Jeremiah, the former Dartmouth star, who was with the Bruins and Cubs, is getting his best chance to show his hockey ability under Herb Gardiner. Until he was picked up by Philadelphia, Jeremiah was unable to get himself away to any Can-Am club. Now he has a regular job

Of the players who have been with the Bruins since the N. H. L. was expanded to two divisions, Eddie Shore and Harry Oliver are the only ones who still retain their original numbers. Shore was allotted No. 2 when he joined the Bruins, and No. 9 was given to Harry Oliver.

When Lionel Hitchman was purchased from Ottawa by the Bruins he was listed on the programs as No. 8, for at that time Archie Briden was wearing No. 3.

It is a real treat to watch Frank "Deacon" Waite make plays. During the last Cub-Arrow game at the Garden Waite made some of the cleverest plays the writer has ever seen. He is uncanny laying pucks on his teammates' sticks at exactly the proper time and place

The fans are getting behind the Hitchman Night testimonial in great shape. "Old Hitch" will always be a big favorite with the followers of hockey and February 22 promises to be a banner night for the veteran and his well wishers.

Since they defeated the Bruins on Jan. 15, the Toronto Maple Leafs have not beaten an American Division club. In fact, during the past fortnight they have only a victory over Maroons to their credit in seven starts.

In all probability Manager Dick Irvin has ordered a let down, for the Leafs can coast from here to the finish and still top the Canadian Division. After playing Detroit tomorrow night the Maple Leafs have only two games until they greet the Bruins in Toronto Feb. 17.

Arcelli Meets Loayza

Werther Arcelli, New England welterweight champion, has been matched to meet Stanley Loayza, Chilean welterweight champion, at the Boston Garden on Feb. 12.

DROP FOOTBALL AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Burlington, Vt., Feb. 3—Football as a major sport at St. Michael's College has been dropped. The locals will not be represented on the gridiron next fall.

This announcement rips the present Green Mountain Conference apart again. Last year, St. Michael's was forced by the action of Vermont, Middlebury and Norwich, either to adhere to the conference rules or have the contests cancelled. The locals agreed early last year to abide by the three-year eligibility rule and forfeit the right to play her freshmen.

Lean Toward Ball, Advice of Tunis

By JOHN R. TUNIS

(Noted tennis writer now writing exclusively for Universal and Boston Evening American)

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc

New York, Feb. 3—(AP)—I had only one piece of advice to give a beginner at tennis, I'd say without hesitation: lean toward the ball, always lean toward the ball, never away from it.

More mistakes in stroke production arise from leaning away from the ball than for almost any other reason. The average player has to run for the ball, often he has to run backward. When he hits it leaning away from it, he is apt to shy it, to push his shot up with a lifting motion which sends it far out of court. Haven't you noticed yourself doing this?

LEAN TOWARD

Try leaning toward the ball. Not merely when actually making a stroke, but all through the rallies. Keep slightly leaning toward the point where the ball is to fall, even when you are running. This will improve your driving. The weight of your body will be on the front foot when you hit it which will add speed to your shot. Lean toward the ball

Leaning away from the ball is one of the great mistakes of the beginner at tennis. Let me give another tennis tip. Paste this in your hat. Never stand still except when making a shot.

Many times you seen dub players flat on their heels until the ball comes, at which instant they start leaning violently like wild men? No wonder the shot goes into the backstop.

KEEP MOVING

So keep moving. Keep on your toes, of course. Be ready to dart to jump, to start in any direction if you do, you shots will catch you unawares. If you stand on your heels, most of them will. You can't stand on your heels when you are moving. Too many beginners make a practice of always standing still except when they make a shot. The one moment when they should be motionless.

MANCUSO MAY HAVE TYPHOID

Houston, Tex., Feb. 3 (AP)—The star catcher of the Giants, Gus Mancuso, is ill here and may have typhoid fever.

Dr. E. M. Armstrong said the first blood count showed no typhoid but that another count to be made within the next two or three days should prove more conclusive.

Charlie Dressen, also a member of the Giants, is in Memorial Hospital here, recuperating from an eight weeks siege of typhoid.

B. C. SEXTET IN BATTLE PLANS SABBATH GAME

The Boston College hockey sextet meets one of its classiest foes tomorrow afternoon when it faces the St. Domenique six in Lewiston, Maine.

The Frenchmen have annexed a series of wins over opponents in amateur circles that will make the Eagles fly high to win a victory.

This will be the first meeting between the two teams, the Chestnut Hill outfit having played the Canadiens on their last trip to Lewiston

The game will be an acid test of the Boston College mettle and will probably be played on natural ice

Ray Funchion, captain and defenseman of the Eagles is expected to be back at his post again. He is the high scorer on the team and he is expected to boost the stock considerably.

GO ASKEW

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—The immediate battle plans of Primo Carnera, Max Schmeling and Paulino Uzcudun were up in the air today following divergent statements from three different sources.

Carnera's manager Leroy said he had accepted an offer of $84,000 for Primo to fight Paulino in Buenos Aires in Buenos Aires in April.

Schmeling's pilot insists Max will get $40,000 for fighting Paulino in Berlin, April 8.

And a cable dispatch to International News Service from Spain today said Paulino had thrown a monkey wrench into his proposed fight with Schmeling by demanding more money and threatening to make a tour of South America.

Goodwin Four Up at Halfway Mark

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 3 (AP)—Tommy Goodwin of Monroe, N. Y., had gained a four-stroke advantage over Bill Stark of Gainesville, Fla., at the end of the first 18 holes of their final match in the national championship of club champions tournament. Goodwin went around in 73, Stark in 77.

Sunday Net Bill Hearing Tuesday

A bill has been filed by Representative Hyman Manevitch in the State Legislature, which provides for the playing of lawn tennis all day on Sunday. Manevitch has filed the bill on behalf of Edward Weisberg of Dorchester, who is active in the move to permit lawn tennis on Sunday

Bill Cook Seeks His 200th Goal

Montreal, Feb. 3 (AP)—When Bill Cook, captain and right wing of the New York Rangers, takes the ice against the Montreal Maroons tonight, he will be shooting for his 200th goal in major league hockey. All he needs is one more.

In his seven previous seasons with the Rangers Bill had scored 187, and he has caged the puck 12 times to date this season.

Hunter Ties Cox at 63-Hole Mark

Agua Caliente, Tex Feb 3 (AP) —Willie Hunter scoring little pro from Culver City, moved into a tie with Wiffy Cox at the 63-hole mark of the 72-hole Agua Caliente open today, shooting a 34, one under for a 245 total. Cox had a par for his 245

Mails Tuning Up for 'Umps' by Talking for Meals

San Francisco, Feb. 3 (INS) — Claiming there is still sufficient elasticity in his left arm of plenty of baseball games, Walter (the Great) Mails today was proving there was plen plenty of bounce left in his vocal chords

Always chatty, sometimes to the disgust of umpires, Mails, in expectancy of a garrulous season on the diamond with the San Francisco seals of the Pacific Coast league, is tuning up by making a series of speeches before various organizations.

"I like to talk, and I like to eat," Mails confided. "This hookup is ideal."

The great Mails claims to be equally adept at mixing a salad or a metaphor

Walter pitches from the port side. His likewise is a forkhander when it comes to victuals.

The latter practice, he explains, keeps the old hyo-glosus muscle in a rubbery condition and when it is rubbery, so he contends, opposing batters are jittery.

Ice Magnates Erred In Setting Date for Bailey Benefit

By BILL GRIMES

Immediately following Pres. Frank Calder's announcement that February 14 had been chosen as the date for the "Ace" Bailey game in Toronto, the testimonial for the injured Maple Leaf player ran into a snag, due to the fact that there are championship contests scheduled for Boston, New York, Chicago and Montreal, for the following night.

During the recent N. H. L. meeting in New York, the board of governors voted unanimously to sanction an All-Star team, comprised of not more than two players from any one club, to play against the Maple Leafs in a benefit game for "Ace" Bailey. A committee was appointed to set the date and select the players. The services of every star and super star in the league were placed at the disposal of the committee.

SET WRONG DATE

Then, came the snag, the selection of February 14. Apparently the committee failed to take into consideration that there were four N. H. L. games to be played the ensuing night, one of which is listed for Boston and another for New York

Moreover, the committee neglected to see that February 16 would have been a far more appropriate date, for there are only two games scheduled for Saturday night and one of these will be played in Toronto.

Naturally, all N. H. L. clubs are anxious to contribute their aid towards the success of Bailey Night. There is not a player in the league who would not jump at an opportunity to participate in the Toronto-All Star game.

BRINS PLAY MAROONS

But, with one or two exceptions the clubs from which the stars have been selected, are fighting for play off berths. They cannot afford to have two of their star players out of any game but if Boston, Maroons, Detroit and Americans send representatives to Toronto, they may be without the services of these players, the following night

On Feb. 15 the Bruins and Maroons play at the Garden. The four players who are picked to play in Toronto from these clubs cannot get back here until after 7 o'clock of the night of the game. They will be obliged to leave Toronto immediately after the benefit game and make the return trip via Montreal, which is almost a 20-hour jump and one which necessitates a change at Montreal

As for the members of the Red Wings and Americans, who play in the Bailey night game, there is not a way that they can reach New York until 8.30 p. m. Thursday, and only at that hour if they go through Montreal

It will be a tough trip for the two Bruins who will leave here for the Queen City.

Had the committee selected February 16, it would have been routine for every club in the league to have all its players available for the next game, for there are but two games listed for Saturday, February 17, Boston at Toronto and Americans at Maroons.

Although all club owners are solicitous that Bailey Night be a complete financial success, they cannot afford to risk losing a playoff position, in order to send two of their stars to play in the testimonial game

Therefore, some of the outstanding stars may not be able to participate, through an oversight on the part of the committee, and more ill-feelings may develop

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

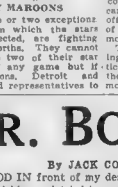
HE STOOD IN front of my desk hat in hand. I glanced at him rather quickly, and tried to remember where I had seen this colored lad before. He was small enough to have been a jockey.

I looked at his face, nose added—eyes that he carried any of the marks of the ring. There were none

There was a twinkle in his eyes as he moved closer to me and extended his hand in greeting

"I'm Chick Suggs, Mr. Boston," the visitor. "You remember me, don't you?"

Dennis Shea, General Manager of the Boston Redskins, was with me at the time. And Parke O'Brien and George Grimm. They were as surprised as I was



Mr. Boston

"I haven't forgotten you, Chick," I replied. "Just couldn't place you for a minute. I'll always remember your boxing. You were one of the greatest featherweights that ever lived. You were the leading colored featherweight since the palmy days of the great George Dixon.

"Suggs' eyes lit up a bit

"I always tried," he said simply. "I'm now looking for a job as a boxing instructor. I thought I might fit in at the new boxing school they have opened at the Garden. You see, Mr. Boston, I'm broke."

Earned $100,000 in Ring

I ASKED SUGGS how much money he has earned during his ring career.

"Over $100,000", he said. "I got my biggest money shot when I fought Dick Finnegan for Tom Goodwin at the Arena. The two drew $38,000 and I received $16,500 for my end. I received other large purses for Boston bouts with Sammy Fuller and 'Red' Chapman.

"What I made over England at that time. Finnegan was the best of the lot. He had a great fighting heart, and was a fine boxer.

"The night I fought him in the Arena, I opened a big gash over one of his eyes in the seventh round. He didn't look as if he could go another round. I don't know who first did up the eye between rounds, but whoever did is entitled to much credit.

"Then I made a fatal mistake. I had been boxing from a crouch, and from that position I could have hit Finnegan's damaged eye instead of continuing to box from a crouch I straightened up, and Finnegan nailed me with two terrific left hand uppercuts in the body. They slowed down my attack.

"Finnegan's body blows got me in the ninth and tenth rounds, and Dick was entitled to the decision he received."

Chapman Best Boxer

I asked Suggs how he rated Chapman

"He was a better boxer than Finnegan, but did not have the latter's fire. None of the present day featherweights compare with Chapman when it comes to boxing ability.

"Fuller first attracted attention as a result of his great showing against me in our first bout in Mechanics Building. I won the decision, but Fuller forced me to the limit right down to the wire.

"In our second bout at the Arena, Fuller received the decision. There was a cry of 'robbery' after the match, but I never thought I won. I had just recovered from an attack of pneumonia, and Fuller was too strong for me. I couldn't get started. If you go back in the newspaper files, you'll find I never attacked the decision."

Stock Market Victim

I ASKED SUGGS how he lost his fortune

"I was a victim of the stock market, Chick," he answered. "Dave Lumiansky, my manager, and myself, shot for the stars, and when things went wrong the sky dropped on us. Lumiansky had much more money than I did, and his losses were heavier. He is now in Europe where he is doing well managing Al Brown, world's bantamweight champion, and as a promoter.

"Lumiansky was a first class manager. He looked after the business end of things, and I did the fighting. I always planned my own battles, and did not look to my corner for advice.

"I'm now living in Newport, R. I., and have a family to support and would like to get work. If I cannot catch on at the Garden, I would like to see the new Providence CWA boxing jobs. Old Chick still knows how to shuffle his feet a mean right hand and nobody is hitting me on the chin. I am only 36 years of age. Old Chick still young enough for most other jobs."

Chick picked his hat from our desk, and bowed his way out of the office.

The gods of chance never intended that boxers should hold on to the money

Herman's Salary Settled in Camp

Chicago, Feb. 3 (CNS)—The matter of Babe Herman's salary for 1934 will be patched up on the baseball diamond by a personal conference. It is reported the Cubs have sought to cut Herman's salary from $20,000 to $12,000

THRILLS IN SPORTS

Charley Harvey Is Pulling Another Fast One for Clouting Steve Hamas

The Old "Everything to Gain and Nothing to Lose" Idea Is Present Again

By Jack Kofoed

Charley Harvey wears a walrus mustache and is older than Methuselah . . . but is a very smart fellow, indeed. At the moment the light of his life is the former Penn State football player, Steve Hamas, who is to fight Max Schmeling at Philadelphia's Convention Hall, Feb. 13.

I don't know how confident old Charley feels about that meeting . . . but it is a very good match, indeed, for him and his young husky. In a manner of speaking, they have everything to gain and nothing to lose . . . except maybe a wallop on Steve's jaw, which Mr. Harvey won't even feel.

The situation is not dissimilar to the one when Harvey sent Hamas into the ring against Tommy Loughran several years ago. Tommy was going great guns against the big fellows, while the Nittany Lion had waged sensational fights on the Pacific Coast. No one conceded Steve a chance to win. Even Charley said: "Well, if he loses it won't do him any harm. If he wins . . . Well, that's another story."

Loughran took Hamas very lightly. His training consisted of a few runs out Gray's Ferry Road and a little boxing in the gymnasium. He felt that all he actually needed was a haircut and shave, anyway, with maybe a shampoo to brighten him up.

In the first round, as I remember, Steve walked in and belted Loughran around the body. That wasn't clubby, for Tom's stomach looked fat and soft. He was in no shape to withstand that sort of treatment and at the end of three minutes was puffing like a switch engine . . . and was down on the flat of his feet.

Having been slowed to a walk, he couldn't keep away from the Hamas thunderbolts. Finally one clipped him on the chin . . . and down he went. There he was . . . white faced and starey eyed . . . all through for the evening. Mr. Harvey had his boy right up in the money. Or rather, he would have been in money, but his trick knee gave out and stopped his advancement for more than a year. Recently he has come back . . . and his recent victory over the clever Lee Ramage indicated that he was ready for any kind of competition.

Max Schmeling's last fight was with Max Baer, as you may remember, the Livermore Larruper practically knocking his brains out with a right hand wallop that would have knocked an elephant flat on its back. Since then the Black Uhlan has done no fighting. He went back to Germany and married the gorgeous Czech actress, Anny Ondra.

The harder boiled members of the fighting profession tell me that marriage is no good for a boxer. Romance and stuffed gloves don't go together no matter what the movies say. Schmeling may have softened up . . . and if he has, Hamas may surprise the talent as they haven't been surprised in a long, long while.

Steve will find out about that very shortly after climbing into the ring. There is no defensive complex in the Lion's heart. He'll shuffle into Schmeling just as steadily as Schmeling shuffles into him . . . and the reverberations of that wallops should be heard all the way to Oak Lane on one side and Paoli on the other. Should Hamas beat the German he'll be ready for a shot at the winner of the

TOMMY LOUGHRAN STEVE HAMAS

Carnera-Loughran fight or Max Baer . . . should Baer decide to forego the flickers and night clubs for a bit of fighting.

If Hamas is beaten he'll be no worse off than he is now. The boys say: "Ah, well, Schmeling was champion of the world once. There's no disgrace in losing to him."

That is what I mean when I say that Harvey and Hamas have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Lena Was Stubborn

It is due only to the stubbornness of Leaping Lena Levy that the ex-football player gets this big chance. Leaping Lena manages that wildcat of the Chicago fish market, King Levinsky. A Levinsky-Schmeling match would have drawn a vast sum in the Windy City, where they think King is a good fighter.

But Lena was overcome with delusions of grandeur. She wanted so big a percentage that the promoters finally left in a huff and a taxicab . . . and the match was off. In the meantime Taylor and Gunnis in Philadelphia arranged the meeting with Hamas, which should be to the financial good of all concerned.

When I was a youngster the Quaker City was the fighting capital of the country. Though only six-round no decision bouts were countenanced the greatest boxers in the world appeared regularly. For quite some time now Philadelphia has been wabbling around on the doldrums, fistically speaking, but all the city needs . . . and that's all any city needs . . . are more good bouts. This Schmeling-Hamas battle is a start in the right direction, anyway.

The Black Uhlan hasn't been an interesting fighter in his last few matches but he was a very interesting one when he started on the way up. Remember him against Johnny Risko? There was a battle to tingle your spine with a finish that might have been written by a novelist. Slam, bang, every inch of the way and a flashing K. O. at the finish. Maybe, now that he has to fight his way back again, Max may capture that old time spirit of his. I hope he does . . . for Hamas is always interesting, even when he loses.

Neither Is a Boxer

Neither of these lads is a boxer. They believe in the power of the sabre rather than that of the rapier. Both will be in there throwing punches, you can take my word for that.

Each man has a fistic idol of his own. Schmehng's is Jack Dempsey. He consciously tried to pattern himself after the Manassa Mauler . . . and even to this day there is no one who can take Dempsey's place in his heart. Hamas, when a kid boxer in State College, admired Tommy Loughran above everyone else, but he never tried to copy Loughran's style because he knew that it wasn't in him to be that kind of a boxer.

When he knocked Tommy kicking that night in the Garden he went to the beaten man's dressing room afterward with actual tears in his eyes. He said: "Tom, I wish it had been any other person in the world but you."

"That's nice of you, Steve," grinned Tom, "but don't worry. I'll be back again."

He is back, too, since he wages war for the heavyweight championship against Primo Carnera in Miami on Feb. 22. It isn't beyond the realm of possibility that some day Steve will fight Tommy for the title . . . but first the Nittany Lion has to get past the grim figure of the Black Uhlan. And that won't be easy.

KANSAS FLIER IS FAVORED IN N. Y. MEET

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—Glenn Cunningham, the Kansan whose "kick" finish has raced everybody into the ground, and Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania, holder of the world indoor record, are to meet again tonight.

A simple, unadorned statement of fact, that. But beneath its plain exterior lies a tremendous story of speed, drama, hysteria and heartbreak. Before it is told, Madison Square Garden will be a bedlam, and all records for one mile may simply be no more.

They will meet at this historic distance at the annual games of the Millrose A. A. Joe Mangan, a great runner from Cornell, will be in the field. So will Glenn Dawson, the Oklahoman with the great rush from the rear, and Crowery, a 4.15 man from Manhattan. But the eyes of a turn-away crowd of 10,000 will be only for Cunningham and Venzke as they annihilate distance and make a fool of time.

Either one of the other will win this race, with Cunningham naturally favored. He "took" Venzke three times at the mile distance last year and was beaten once at 1500-meters, although Venzke barely lasted to the tape. He may even repeat this effort tonight and run to his world indoor record of 4.10, but somehow one senser that it won't be enough.

CUNNINGHAM A FIGHTER

Cunningham has done no actual racing since his European tour last summer, but he's ready. He proved that to Bill Hargiss, his coach, last week when he ran three-quarters under the watch of the makeshift Kansas University board track in 3.12. He did 3.18 on pretty much the same track before he came East for the indoor races last winter, so figure it out for yourself. The Kansas track, they say, is a little faster now But not that much.

As for Venzke, he has raced himself back to the point where he was the reigning sensation of the 1932 indoor season. They say Venzke's judgment of pace is just as acute now as it was then, which is all very well. But I notice that it's very difficult to out-think a terrific burst of speed on the bell lap

In other words, if Venzke can run to his 4:10 tenight, the record will probably go, because he'll take Cunningham with him to the last two laps. After that, if there's any taking to be done, Cunningham will probably do it.

He shaded 4 10 outdoors in Chicago last summer and can repeat on the fast Garden track, if properly incited. Even the world outdoor record of 4 07.6 by Lovelock, the New Zealander, won't be safe under those conditions. For, in common with everybody else, I've come to believe that this tremendous man from Kansas will run just as fast as they make him.

SPITZ VS. MARTY

The boys, of course, are blathering when they talk about the fourminute mile. A few years ago, in fact, this was only a vision, but today they discuss it in terms of serious conjecture. It means seven yards in one second and a quarter of a mile in 60—for a distance of 1760 yards. And when you get down to a point where somebody runs 49 yards faster than Lovelock did that hot day last July, they won't need a stop watch. They'll have to have a dictaphone.

Walter Marty and George Spitz are also supposed to do 6 feet 9 inches, or thereabouts, for a world record in the high jump, but I don't think they will—unless Spitz does it. Marty, the world's record holder, has had less than a week of experience with indoor spikes and hasn't bettered 6 feet 2 inches here. They expect him to do about "six-six" under the spur of competition.

Ralph Metcalfe and Emmett Toppino are a cinch to equal the 60-yard record, :6 1-3. But they won't better it. The man doesn't live who can beat that time.

Johnny Morriss of Louisiana figures to take the hurdle record, however. It's 7.4-5 by George Guthrie, the old Ohio State man.

Well-Suited Go Shapes Up

M'COY SCORES UPSET WIN

By JACK CONWAY

Al McCoy of Dorchester finished a ring upset and gave Vincent Affinito a decisive setback as part of the New Deal boxing show at the Boston Garden

Affinito, with a run of three victories in local rings, was a heavy favorite. McCoy didn't permit that fact to ruffle him. He outfought and outboxed his opponent

Affinito did his most effective work in the early stages of the contest. He tired beginning with the sixth round, and the aggressor and active McCoy piled up a comfortable lead

There were not any knockdowns as Affinito stepped to the deck in the sixth session, while McCoy slipped to the canvas in the eighth round and again in the tenth session.

Affinito made a fiery finish in the tenth round in an effort to pull the decision out of the fire but his rally was too late

The verdict of Referee Johnny Brassil and Judges Frank Montgomery and Francis Bowman was unanimous. McCoy weighed 162 pounds against 157 for Affinito

The New Deal show attracted 2374 fans. The gross gate was $2504, and the net gate $1781.

Minor eleven-a-left in the hunt were cut to one when Ross County defeated Glasgow Th 3 Vale of Leven was knocked out by St. Johnstone

McCoy Win Upsets Coin's Magic

Al McCoy handed Jack Conway's Magic Coin a reverse when he defeated Vincent Affinito at the New Deal boxing show at the Garden.

DERBY COUNTY GAINS LEAD

London Feb 3 (AP) The English football league had a new leader today in the fighting derby county outfit, Arsenal being toppled from the top of the heap by the local Eastern team.

In a surprising result the Tof feemakers defeated Arsenal by a 2-1 score while Derby County was mobbing Sto City into submission 5-0 to 1

Huddersfield Town won over Wolverhampton Wanderers 2-1 thereby giving it a tie with the Arsenal for second place and Manchester City trimmed over Tottenham Hotspurs into fifth place by a 3-2 while the Spurs were losing at Liverpool 3-1

Many of the games were played in a smoke of fog which caused considerable confusion in the Leicester City and Millwall-Southampton matches while the Grimsby Town-Port Vale fixture was postponed

With both the first and second place elevens, Grimsby Town and Port Vale, in enforced idleness, Brentford took the opportunity to get nearer the top of the second division by defeating Bolton Wanderers 3—1

Motherwell was held to a 3—3 tie at Partick's Thistle's grounds in the second round of the Scottish football cup

Glasgow Celtic, the cupholder, progressed after a hard tussle at Ayr United winning 3 2 and Glasgow Rangers, league champions, had an easy time at third Lanark, winning 3 to 0

Walsh Mentioned as N. Y. U. Coach

New York, Feb. 3 (INS)—Adam Walsh, former Notre Dame star, and until recently line coach of the Yale football team today was under consideration for the job of head coach at New York University.

N. Y. U. authorities today said they had no inhibitions about old grad coaches such as caused such a furore among Yale men and the job is considered wide open. The best man available will be selected, and the lucky individual will receive plenty of kopecks. This does N. Y. U. go off its "de-emphasized" basis.

BROADWAY BROADCAST ON TONIGHT

New York Radio Playhouse Opening

By N. F. T.

Microphones take to the stage in the proverbial grand manner this evening down New York way. In fact, broadcasting moves right into and onto Broadway when the Columbia Network people formally open the Radio Playhouse. All America will hear the proceedings (WNAC) between 10.30 and midnight, with a galaxy of big time air stars taking part. It's a theater designed exclusively for radio broadcasting, and that for the public to witness.

ALL STAR ATTRACTION

When the "curtain" goes up this evening, and, incidentally, it's a glass curtain, a colorful performance is scheduled. Come to think of it, things get under way when the "curtain" comes down, which how they will start the big sound show. In any event, Ruth Etting, Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud, Edwin C. Hill, Fray and Braggiotti an augmented orchestra directed in turn by Howard Barlow, Freddie Rich, Andrea Kostelanetz and Mark Warnow, in addition to Georgie Jessel, Alexander Woolcott and a host of other well-known program personalities, will take spotlight turns. This certainly looks and should sound like the topnotch program promise for tonight.

Word just arrives that Guy Lombardo, Burns and Allen and the popular Bing Crosby will send a salute cross country from California during the above "Radio Playhouse" premiere.

ONCE ONLY

East and Dumke, two quite often funny fat fellows you may know, or know of better as "Eddie and Ralph" have been put in to take a "One night studio" stand this evening. It's a bit called the "Saturday Night Smoker" as slated (WEEI) at 6:45 p. m.

Joe Penner, the well known "nasty man" mimic, has decided smart quips should be called "wise quacks" to help him sell more ducks.

SUNDAY SELECTIONS

Striking Sabbath studio shows are most likely led by the new "Waring's Pennsylvanians" program (WNAC) as set from 8.30 until 9 o'clock and marking the first Ford film by Fred Waring and his melody makers, Edsel Ford, big boss of the motor car outfit and son of the whole works head, speaks during the premiere, with Marion Talley, noted American operatic soprano, as guest artist . . . Rubinoff, the Eddie Cantor hour (WBZ) 8 to 9 features some special classic music tomorrow night . . . George Gershwin, the popular tune creator, will also be a guest artist (WBZ) when Ted Weems and his orchestra occupy the coast to coast waves at 6 o'clock Sunday evening.

Live News of Active Leaders in Wall St.

SURPRISINGLY good statement for last year issued by National Distillers has aroused keen interest in the forthcoming report of Schenley Distilleries, due in about two weeks. Although no preliminary figures are obtainable, interests close to the company doubt the results will come up to those of National.

Gulf Oil Dividends Seen as Possibility

Inauguration of Dividends Likely

The Schenley figures will cover the period from July 11 to the end of the year. It is reported, however, that the report will show the company in a position to inaugurate quarterly dividends of 75 cents a share some time in 1934. National earned over $2 a share in the December quarter and $3.25 for the year, without including its share of revenue from Penn Maryland, an important subsidiary. In connection with talk of a dividend by National, some quarters feel this may be given secondary consideration to modernization of certain distilleries worn down by idleness.

February Market Record Studied

Buoyancy which ushered in the month of February on the stock market started a search of the records for a possible means of figuring the price outlook the next few weeks. Although conditions influencing prices are unprecedented, the Street still is disposed to feel the market follows a routine monthly pattern. History reveals that in each of the past 13 years stocks during February have registered some appreciation over the closing January levels. In eight of these years February closed with average prices above the end of the previous month. In two years the highs for the month were registered during the first 10 days.

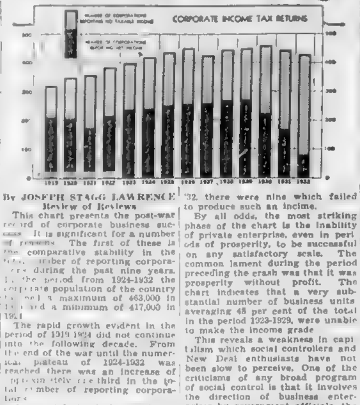
Business Income Lags



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

This chart presents the post-war record of corporate business success. It is significant for a number of reasons. The first of these is the comparative stability in the total number of reporting corporations during the past nine years. In the period from 1924-1932 the corporate population of the country reached a maximum of 463,000 in [illegible] and a minimum of 417,000 in 1924.

The rapid growth evident in the period of 1919-1924 did not continue into the following decade. From the end of the war until the numerical plateau of 1924-1932 was reached there was an increase of approximately one third in the total number of reporting corporations.

A second factor to be noted one which can certainly cause no surprise, is the rapid decline in the number of corporate enterprises which were in the black during the period from 1929-1932. Where 269,430 corporations showed a balance on the right side of the ledger in 1929, this number had declined to 78,775.

Using round numbers, it may be said that for every two corporations which showed a net income in '32, there were nine which failed to produce such an income.

By all odds, the most striking phase of the chart is the inability of private enterprise, even in periods of prosperity, to be successful on any satisfactory scale. The common lament during the period preceding the crash was that it was prosperity without profit. The chart indicates that a very substantial number of business units averaging 48 per cent of the total in the period 1923-1929, were unable to make the income grade.

This reveals a weakness in capitalism which social controllers and New Deal enthusiasts have not been slow to perceive. One of the criticisms of any broad program of social control is that it involves the direction of business enterprises by government officials, the clear implication being that business enterprises could not be managed successfully by government officials.

Without in any way prejudicing the validity of that statement, the fact remains that private managements in very substantial numbers were similarly incapable of directing enterprises successfully under conditions which we now recognize were most propitious.

SHARE PRICES CLOSE HIGHER IN BOSTON

Several New Highs Are Set in Active Dealings

Share prices showed strength at the close of today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Textile issues were leaders in the rise, with American Woolen preferred reaching a new high for the year on a run-up of over a point. The common showed a gain of better than a point. Pacific Mills held steady around its previous closing level.

Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway preferred, United Fruit and United Shoe were at new highs on gains of 1 to 2 points. Boston & Maine issues were strong with the C stamped soaring 3 points and the D stamped over a point.

Atchison advanced more than a point and New Haven was fractionally higher. Edison Electric and American Telephone were slightly higher. New England Telephone was a shade lower.

North Western Loadings Are Up

Chicago, Feb. 3—Loadings on lines of Chicago & North Western Railway during January were 21.7 per cent above like 1933 month, against gain of 5.6 per cent over year ago registered in December.

Cotton Firm at Close in New York

New York, Feb. 3—Cotton futures today finished the week on a firm note, swinging upward more than 25 cents a bale to within a fraction of the season's highs set on Thursday. Strength in grain and securities, combined with higher cotton prices in Liverpool served to stimulate demand for contracts.

Futures closed firm, 14 to 19 higher. March 11.59-60; May 11.76-78; July 11.92-94; October 12.10-12; December 12.21; January 12.34. Spot steady; middling 11.94.

Hide Prices Are Steady at Close

New York, Feb. 3—Raw hide futures were steady at the close, 3 to 8 higher. Sales approximated 800,000 lbs.

NEW HIGHS SET FOR STOCK LEADERS

New York, February 3—After early irregularity share prices strengthened materially in the closing hour today, with many issues setting new highs. All groups participated with merchandise and rails leading the way. As the market drew to a close the motor stocks worked higher on the largest volume in weeks with General Motors setting a new high for the bull movement, while Chrysler hovered within a minor fraction of a fresh top.

Of the merchandise issues the chain stores were in heavy demand. Both Montgomery and Sears broke through former highs on termendous turnover. Kresge and Woolworth were also taken in large blocks.

The steels themselves acted well, forging ahead to within reach of the tops set earlier this week, spurred on by the knowledge the railroads were at last placing requirements for much needed replacements.

Gains of moderate proportion ruled in the first hour of trading. The list started irregular and most changes were of a fractional nature. Prices firmed shortly after the opening and at the end of the period showed firmness.

Gains of 2 or more points appeared for American Locomotive, American Sugar and Auburn. U. S. Steel was a minor fraction higher. Point or better gains appeared for Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, American Woolen, Case Threshing and Celanese.

Chrysler, du Pont, Delaware & Hudson, Eastman Kodak, Great Western Sugar, Johns Manville, Kresge, Montgomery Ward and U. S. Smelting were a point or more higher. Woolworth and Westinghouse showed gains of a point or better.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 870,000 shares.

With New York commercial banks ransacking foreign centers for gold, some exchange experts believed it would not be long before leading European currencies were pushed up to the new dollar's parity.

It was estimated that between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 of the metal has already been purchased for quick transportation to the United States where it will immediately be sold to the treasury at a substantial profit to the importers.

BLONDE GODDESS

By HERBERT JENSEN

Don Raoul Ortega Rijon y Mendosa had dined well. He felt very comfortable with the world.

He leaned against the doorway of the restaurant, savoring the last pleasures of the meal when a little black dog scampered around the corner of the street and galloped through the dust toward Don Raoul. It was evident that the dog would pass the gentleman at a distance of about five yards.

Don Raoul drew his revolver from his belt. He cocked and leveled it at the loping dog and pressed the trigger. The report and the yelp of the little animal broke the stillness of the sleepy street.

HER PET KILLED

The dog squirmed in the dust, and began to crawl back to the corner from which it came. Don Raoul, in the act of replacing his revolver, made a hissing noise of self reproach, and aimed and fired again. The dog quivered and lay still.

The man nodded thoughtfully, yet with evident satisfaction, and pushed the revolver into its holster. His shoulders straightened. His eyes darted up and down the street swiftly to see if any had witnessed his lapse in marksmanship. He sighed, and lighting a black cigarette strolled down the street toward the freight wharves.

Sometime later a little mestiza girl skipped around the corner and stopped short at the sight of the huddle that had been the dog.

"Chiquito!" she cried. Her childish treble broke. Tears streamed from her eyes as she fell beside the little body.

Grahame, strolling around the corner toward the wharves, caught sight of the small tragedy before him. He threw away his cigaret and lifted the child to her feet. She still clung to the dog.

"There, there," he said soothingly. "We will take your child home and bury him fittingly. Here . . ." He pressed a peso into her hand.

IDENTIFIED LAUNCH

Grahame continued his interrupted walk to the wharves. He identified the launch that was to take him down the coast, by his luggage piled upon the deck.

Two men were indolently coiling ropes, and a figure sat on the deck house surrounded with oil rags and cleaning a revolver.

"Senor Ortega?" asked Grahame.

"At your service," replied the man, brushing the rags aside.

The American stared at the gun. "When do we leave?"

"Whenever you wish. Immediately."

Grahame leaped down to the launch's deck. He looked again at the revolver. "Was it you I heard shooting in the town a little while ago?"

Don Raoul hesitated. "No," he replied. "I have been here for hours."

The two men paused with their rope-coiling and glanced at Ortega. One of them grinned and turned his head. Don Raoul spoke to them sharply and one went below while the other loosened the lines that held the craft to the wharf.

An hour later the Progreso lighthouse was a hazy point astern, and the Yucatan coast a low line to the starboard as they pushed against the Gulf current.

Grahame and Ortega lounged in the cockpit, smoking and idly watching a school of porpoise roll through the waves ahead.

Before they had gotten under way Frank, struck by the coincidence of names, had asked this Don Raoul Ortega if he were the one who had been in the United States a few weeks before in Hollywood.

RELATIVES APLENTY

Also he had anticipated the answer. Ortega is a common name in Mexico; so again is Raoul—which is the Latin for Ralph. Nor was he disappointed.

The man had shrugged. "A relative, perhaps. Half the gentlemen in Mexico, I think, are related. Why do you ask? Some friend of yours?"

Ortega had given him a flickering glance. He smiled a curiously reticent smile.

"What did you say your name was, senor?"

"I didn't say," answered Grahame abruptly.

They ate just before dusk, the inevitable beans and rice, with slabs of a decilicious mackerel-like fish one of the crew had hauled aboard from a troll-line. Grahame spread his blanket in the bow of the launch and rolled himself within it. Drowsily he wondered why they had set no running lights, but decided that the traffic in that part of the coast warranted no such protection.

Grahame watched the vessel head toward the distant horizon. If Ortega's operations were illegal, they did not concern him.

At dusk they continued their journey. The next day they rounded Cape Catoche and sailed south.

The crew took turns at the wheel, and Grahame and Ortega sat on the deck house and smoked. Grahame asked the big man when they would be at the island and was answered that it would be tomorrow, in the afternoon perhaps. Ortega seemed to be pondering.

"I was thinking," he said, "that your island would not be the place you want to go. It would be safer on the mainland."

The next day they had been sailing within a quarter of a mile of the coast when Ortega pointed astern. The crew followed his gesture with their gaze, and Grahame noticed a smudge of smoke over the distant horizon.

PLANS BASE ON ISLAND

Immediately the helm was put over and the launch headed for the beach and a point where the surf diminished. Within a few minutes the launch passed through the narrow straits and onto the placid waters of a lagoon that stretched back paralleling the beach. Mangroves hid the launch from the sea.

Grahame smiled. "You told me it was unsafe on the mainland."

"But I have been thinking. I could use you at my hacienda. It would be hard work, often And you could make some money."

Why not go with Ortega, Grahame thought. After all, his idea was not to remain at the island, but to use it as a base at which he could make inquiries as to the mainland back of the coast.

Grahame made his decision. "I'll go with you to your hacienda," he said. "I won't promise to work for you, until I look it over. If I decide not to stay, I will pay you for my lodgings and leave. All right?"

Ortega nodded and smiled a little as he looked at Grahame. "All right," he said.

The launch slid between the roots of mangroves that gripped the shores of a lagoon which was like a narrow river except that the water was salt. They chugged along until they were two or three miles inland from the coast, when the passage widened into a lake several hundred yards in circumference.

They edged inward toward a small wharf extending at water level several yards into the lake. The water's edge back of the wharf had been cleared and in the clearing were several flimsy buildings of palm-thatch.

Grahame helped with the unloading. As the first case slid from the deck to the pier he uttered an exclamation. The size and weight of the case was unmistakable.

HUNDREDS OF RIFLES

Ortega and his two helpers paused to watch him.

"Someone is going hunting, I see," he remarked dryly.

Ortega's reply was equally ironic. "In this coutry," he said, there is always hunting.

The unloading was accomplished without further comment. Grahame estimated that in the cargo there were cases containing at least two hundred rifles and a substantial amount of ammunition. Sufficient, certainly, to equip quite a little army, as numbers went in these countries.

Ortega brought up the subject that evening. "You think because you have heard rumors of revolution in Mexico, that these guns are for the revolutionists. It is not so. True, there is a revolution brewing just now,—that is why I avoided the gunboat the other day. But this cargo is to be used solely for defense. I have brought many such."

"In the morning we will leave and go farther south. I wish to pick up another cargo, and return to Progreso.

"What cargo is that?" asked Grahame, idly, still pondering on the strangeness of this subofficial transaction.

"Cocaine," said Ortega. "It is very profitable. From Progreso it is taken to the United States."

They were seated at the table smoking over the remnants of their meal. Grahame threw his cigaret stub away.

"I am not interested in dope running," he said. "But I would like to investigate the country back of here. You need not be concerned," he continued, half contemptuously as he saw Ortega's face darken.

Bluff Overcall Effective

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A bluff overcall of no-trump when the player making it is not vulnerable and has a long and fairly strong escape suit in reserve frequently proves quite effective in preventing opponents from reaching their best results.

Such was the recent experience of Mr. Sherman Stearns, who, in his bridge play at the Cavendish Club, New York, is noted for his liking for bluff and psychic bids.

West, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North: ♠ 9; ♡ A J 10 8 6 5; ◇ 8; ♣ K 10 7 6 5

West: ♠ A Q 10 7 6 5; ♡ 7; ◇ A J; ♣ 9 4 3 2

East: ♠ K J 4 3 2; ♡ Q 9 4 3; ◇ 7 6 5 2; ♣ —

South: ♠ 8; ♡ K 2; ◇ K Q 10 9 4 3; ♣ A Q J 8

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 NT (1)	Double (2)	Pass
Pass	3 ♡	3 ♠	4 ◇
4 ♠	5 ♣ (3)	Pass	Pass
Double (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Mr. Stearns, who held the North hand, wanted to be doubled at a low contract. His hand was of very freakish distribution and he rightly feared that his vulnerable opponents might easily make game at spades. To prevent opponents from playing the hand at a makable contract without paying a disproportionate penalty is the underlying purpose of the bluff no-trump bid.

(2) East, of course, recognized that North's bid was purely a bluff. His Double, however, was not the best course. A much more satisfactory result would, no doubt, have been attained by a free Raise of partner's Opening bid.

(3) South had shown considerable strength by his pass of the no-trump Double and his bid of four diamonds, and North felt that a set at hearts or clubs should not be over-expensive.

(4) At this point West probably had no other alternative. His hand had four trumps which were likely to prove annoying to the Declarer, and he feared that five spades could not be made as it was entirely possible that North had a spade trick.

In the play five clubs were made —a most agreeable denouement to a hand in which East and West could have made five spades.

TRUE CONFESSION DEPARTMENT.

HARRISBURG (Pa.) — Candidates for newly created State liquor control jobs have indignantly protested against the examination given them because it contained such befuddling questions as: "A boy's father's father is what relation to him?" and "Four times nothing is what?" To the latter question a number of applicants answered "four."

America's Greatest Patriots Warned of Disasters of Unpreparedness

"LET us lift up our eyes unto the hills from whence cometh our help."

In times of danger, of distracted counsels, of conflicting preoccupations, when our energies are wearied by exertions which abnormal conditions put upon them, it is well for us to emulate the wisdom of the psalmist—and lift up our eyes to the great men of the past—men of patriotism and foresight—to those human summits in which our history is so rich.

Their words are preserved to us. Let us pore over them, take them to heart and keep them in mind as a call to duty—the vital, nay the primary, duty resting upon us of maintaining our country in a state of RATIONAL—and that means ADEQUATE—preparedness and defense.

The horrors of war—so graphically portrayed in the uncensored war photographs now appearing in the Sunday Hearst papers—war's carnage and waste and its peril to our survival as a nation have at all times been clearly envisaged by the nation's founders and the great Americans who came after them.

They were lovers of peace, but they did not propose to brook injury. They were ready to meet force with force, if necessary.

These were the words of Washington in his first message to Congress:

"To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace.

"The safety of the United States, under divine protection, ought to rest on the basis of systematic and solid arrangements, exposed as little as possible to the hazard of fortuitous circumstances."

In a subsequent message to Congress, the warning is repeated:

"I cannot recommend to your notice measures for the fulfillment of our duties to the rest of the world without again pressing upon you the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defense and of exacting from them the fulfillment of their duties towards us. The United States ought not to indulge a persuasion that, contrary to the order of human events, they will forever keep at a distance those painful appeals to arms with which the history of every other nation abounds.

"There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace it must be known that we are at all times ready for war."

In a later message, Washington returned to the subject, saying:

"Will it not then be advisable to begin without delay to provide and lay up materials for the building and equipping of ships of war, and to proceed in the work by degrees in proportion as our resources shall render it practicable without inconvenience, so that a future war in Europe may not find our commerce in the same unprotected state in which it was found during the present?"

John Adams, when President, discussing our relations with France, used these words:

"But in demonstrating by our conduct that we do not fear war in the necessary protection of our rights and honor, we should give no room to infer that we abandon the desire of peace. An efficient preparation for war can alone secure peace. We ought, without loss of time, to lay the foundations for that increase of our navy to a size sufficient to guard our coasts and protect our trade."

Thomas Jefferson spoke to the same effect:

"If war be forced upon us," said he, "in spite of our long and vain appeals to the justice of nations, rapid and vigorous movement at the outset will go far toward securing us in its course and issue, and toward throwing its burdens on those who render necessary the resort from reason to force."

A modern soldier and patriot, the late General Leonard Wood, expressed the philosophy of preparedness in a sentence which might well serve as a national slogan:

"IT IS BETTER," said he, "TO BE READY FOR WAR AND NOT HAVE IT THAN TO HAVE WAR AND NOT BE READY FOR IT!"

And he reminds us that war is with us today, as it was with us yesterday, and has been a part of man's lot through all the years since history began.

"Peace leagues struggle to prevent it," said he, "and great alliances attempt to abate it."

But it will disappear, he reminds us, only when absolutely unselfish justice marks international relations; when trade is equitably shared among competing peoples; and when competition, greed, selfishness, race interest, prejudices, and religious intolerance pass away.

These are stirring thoughts of great men! We must cherish them! We must act upon them.

THEY ARE A CHART OF NATIONAL SAFETY!

In next Sunday's Boston Advertiser another five-page instalment of UNCENSORED World War pictures will be published.

These pictures should bring home to every American who sees them the imperative necessity for heeding the advice and the warnings of our great leaders of the past.

We must do as they would have us do—keep foreign wars out of America, and keep America out of foreign wars.

Dead Men Everywhere Where is the glory of war in this picture? The scene is at La Basse, on the Flanders battleground. The dead are German boys and in this sector the number of killed was almost beyond belief. More pictures of the horrors of war will appear Sunday in the Boston Advertiser—five full pages. All point to one thing—keep foreign wars out of America, and keep America out of foreign wars. Underwood & Underwood Photo. Copyright by Keystone Service.

Yankee Traders Needed

Senator Burton K. Wheeler was as right as right can be when he declared that New England must take the lead in regaining the foreign markets that have been lost to the United States.

Our domestic market is our first and primary concern, of course.

We consume about 87 per cent of our own production and, until the depression came, we had the richest domestic markets known in the history of the world.

But it is important to sell our other thirteen per cent favorably in the trade marts of the world, against the best competition of other Nations. This thirteen per cent can represent the difference between profit and loss to our industries as a whole.

The cheap currency Nations devaluated their currency for the deliberate purpose fo regaining the markets that the United States had captured while the European nations lay prostrate from the effects of the World War. They have made striking progress against us. The Chinese textile industry, which is operated by British and Japanese capital, sold Eight Million square yards of cotton to India in 1912 and Six Hundred and Forty-Five Million square yards of the same fabric in 1933. During this period, our exports dropped eighty per cent.

Our New England industrialists have diversified their products greatly in the past twenty years, but we can not escape the fact, nor should we try to, that the manufacure of textiles and boots and shoes still constitutes our basic industries. We should try to live up to our glorious record of the past when our Yankee traders carried the New England goods first into the ports of the world.

We should like to see the Drapers, Graton and Knight, Crompton and Knowles and all the other distinguished New England firms which are prominent in the textile, leather and textile-machinery fields, strike out together to redeem the markets that formerly were our markets. The fixation of the gold dollar, the remonetization of silver and some of the other fictitious currency acts will help. But, most of all, old-fashioned Yankee aggressiveness is desired to achieve the end.

U. S. Wine at White House

Mrs. Roosevelt's decision to serve "simple" wines—chiefly American—and beer at the White House is wise and praiseworthy.

The example set by the President's family always has a considerable social influence throughout the country.

Light wines and beers harm nobody.

Their use in moderation makes for temperance.

So we are glad to see that "The First Lady" has taken this common sense attitude toward the beverages which shall be served in her own household.

We think most American women and many American men will agree that it represents the right course for any family to follow.

And we believe also that the decision to serve American wines in preference to foreign will be of distinct aid to the American wine industry.

These home-grown vintages are of first rate quality, and if they are good enough for the White House they ought to be good enough for any other home in the land.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Feb. 3—Vagaries Henry Bell sent me a hail about them. They dance gracefully each afternoon in a Broadway dance place. Her face is aureoled with a Madonna spirituality, although she's a hunch-back. He's a handsome figure of youth whose eyes are glazed in milky film. stone blind.

From a side table I watched, wondering what, if any, difference sight and a straight body would have meant to the pair of Nature's misfits. Sight and health to join arrogantly and on equal footing the merry surrounding swirl. Physically out of the race, there was nobility in their isolation.

Once the music stopped as they neared our table. Her voice seemed velvety with affection and joy of service. One knew instinctively the youth with blank eyes was her idol, her lover, her child rolled into one helpless human. How right Montaigne: "Tragedy glints the most exquisite of beauty!"

Blur of mixed thoughts! The most fascinating eyes are not always largely luminous. Those of Margaret Whiteman and Elinor Glyn, for instance . . . Strange name for a gentleman—Egbert Gesells . . . Floaty, dawn-kissed Tallulah Bankhead is a hot biscuit and gravey supper . . . It is easy to guess that Bob Woolsey began life a jockey.

Swashbuckling novels of romantic duels at sun-up fascinated me until eight years ago. We were—my wife and I, Will Hogg and Erskine Gwynne—in a San Sebastian cafe where political discussions seethed. Past our table swung a grotesque character we learned was a senator, habited in red plush-lined cape, with mammoth hat and swagger stick. He circled our party often, staring as only a Spaniard stares. Someone laughed. His eyes riveted on me. I bowed bewildered and he swirled off in high rage. Later his card on a silver tray. A member of our party translated a challenge to duel. I tried to laugh it off, but the cafe manager looked worried. After explanation it was patched up. He was an expert at the duello. Since, reading swashbucklers makes me faint.

Recently I sat directly behind George Jean Nathan at the play. Beside him was the feathery girlish Lillian Gish in an ensemble of petit-trianon gray. Interesting to watch Nathan's detachment and immobility, not once relaxing from statue-like stiffness. At the intermission he did not come back, his Rialto symbol of disapproval I sensed. But all other critics thought differently next morning.

The other morning my restaurant table was near a blonde cashier who was a Grace George of 20 years ago. I have never seen a cashier arrive or leave. All possess the calm superiority of the mathematically minded. When one looks at 'em never be flattered that in some remote corner of her exact mentality is admiration. She may bestow a prop smile, but you are just one of the automatons in her vista with constantly moving jaws. She is thinking automatically: "Forty-five out of a dollar leaves fifty-five!"

The Lawrence Tibbetts' new home is almost an entire floor of sunny spaciousness on East End ave. overlooking the rocky outcrop and patch of greenery that are Carl Schurs park. I wondered if life in the building did not suspend when the operatic baritone gave voice to morning mi, mi, mis. Or rehearsal arias. I know a music lover who rented a home near Tibbett in open-windowed Beverly just to hear him sing. He arrived the other day among the tea gatherers at his New York apartment flushed with an afternoon triumph in "Emperor Jones" and after hurried greetings bee-lined for the nursery. Incidentally, the initials of the new Tibbet heir—Michael Edward Tibbett—quite appropriately spell "Met."

SMILES VS. TEARS

Would I could write a song that would beguile
All hearts of pain and leave a lasting smile;
But smiles are lovely, only when they grow
Twixt pain and heartaches, planted row by row.

"Cry not!" "Grieve not!" are words I never say.
Too real is anguish to be soothed that way.
I whisper only, "Wait a little while,
Some day shall grief make lovelier your smile.

"Someday you shall remember and be glad To count the hours of happiness you've had:
But all the brave and gentle souls you know
Have planted smiles and heartaches, row by row."

Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

SHE'S FURIOUS. Last night as she swept, lace-gowned, from her car to the theatre lobby, a ragged man sneered at her—mumbled a vile name.

"It has destroyed the last shred of my patience with the so-called 'underdog,'" she storms.

"I was always in sympathy with the working classes, because I was one of them—and still am. The car which aroused that tramp's anger, I paid for myself, every dollar of it. I earned the dress I was wearing, and the ticket that took me into that show.

Elsie Robinson

"I've earned these things by years of drudgery, discipline and sacrifice, such as that loafer would never have endured. Every line of his weak face and shambling body told his story. But just because I love the fine things of life, and have been willing to work for them, he and his kind treat me like a criminal.

"And it's happening everywhere. In spite of our better times and tremendous effort to give everyone a better deal, there has never been so much class hatred. You hear it on all sides—from whining and grumbling to open threats. And nine times out of ten, the unfortunate people who are threatened are workers, like themselves.

"Where is the justice in that? And how can you openly sympathize—as you do—with the attitude of such people?"

How can I sympathize with them? Because once I was one of them, my dear. Once I, too, stood in the shadows, ragged and desperate, and watched the lace-gowned fortunates sweep by—and the bitterness that filled that man's heart last night, filled mine.

I didn't call names, as he did. I didn't threaten. But that was due to no saintliness in me. It was simply due to the fact that life gave me a healthier body and viewpoint than it gave him. And so, bitter though I was, I saw the reason for it all.

I saw that the thing that put me in the shadows, and them in the light, wasn't the work of any one person. IT WAS A CONSEQUENCE OF A SYSTEM. SOME COULD PROFIT BY THAT SYSTEM—SOME COULDN'T.

You, for example, have profited by it. I have profited by it now—when it's too late to save the thing I loved best on earth. And you think we're being rewarded for our individual efforts. But we're not! WE'RE SITTING PRETTY BECAUSE THINGS BROKE RIGHT FOR US—AND BECAUSE OUR EFFORTS CLICKED WITH THE STATUS QUO.

Millions of others worked as hard as we did, sacrificed as greatly, endured as bravely—yet were unable to make the grade. It wasn't their fault. They were doomed to failure by birth, environment or tragic circumstances. The cards were stacked against them.

Why did that man sneer? That's why. He wasn't sneering at you, as an individual.

HE WAS SNEERING AT A SYSTEM WHICH IMPOSES SUCH INJUSTICE AS THAT.

Democracy? It's a noble theory—and some day, with God's help, we'll achieve it. But the simple truth is, we haven't achieved it. We haven't even sincerely tried to achieve it yet.

So don't be angry when they sneer from out of the shadows.

COMMISERATE YOURSELF, RATHER, BECAUSE IN A LAND OF SUNSHINE, SOME MUST LIVE IN SHADOWS!

AND USE THE ENERGY WHICH MADE YOU AN INDIVIDUAL SUCCESS INTO WIPING OUT THE SHADOWS FOR THOSE WHO WEREN'T SO FORTUNATE!

Human Side of the News; Echoes From Hollywood

By Edwin C. Hill

Those fixers and racketeers who have tried to make Miss West their prey are learning to their sorrow that the lady with the svelte figure and the husky voice can play the role of "I'm No Coward" just as effectively as she played the role of "I'm No Angel." And the thugs who robbed her of $34,000 in money and jewelry came in for a rude awakening wailing justice in a state where they don't like to see any woman get the worst of it.

The strong-arm boys certainly didn't know their victim when they thought they could frighten her into silence by the threat of killing her if she went to the police or identified them. They overlooked the fact that the pulchritudinous Miss West has fighting blood in her veins. She spent her childhood in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, and a childhood spent in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn meant the survival of the fittest. It was, so far as Mae West was concerned, an elegant education in the school of hard knocks, that school which graduates its students with the degree of self-sufficiency summa cum laude.

Colonel West—for we must forget that the lady who invites us all to come up and see her sometime is a colonel on the staff of the Governor of Kentucky—is the daughter of Billy West, who, in his day, was one of the best middleweight fighters ever to lace on a glove. After a rough and tumble childhood, Miss West was soon doing baby roles in Brooklyn stock companies, and then going on her own in chorus work and in vaudeville.

THEY KNOW NOW

She is really a rare character and a born showman, with an almost perfect flair for the effective touches of the theater. She has never read books, yet she writes her own plays, for human life is her library, the people she has known.

She is simple in her taste, naive and loyal to her people and her friends. If she is inordinately proud of anything it is the nerves that make her the Lillian Russell of the present age—but a much slimmer, trimmer Lillian than the original model who glorified Weber and Fields and Broadway in the days of hansom cabs and the little bird on Nellie's hat.

She neither drinks nor smokes. She doesn't like night clubs, and she doesn't go to parties. She is one of the hardest workers in Hollywood, for she writes every line of her own stuff, and over and over again. She has never married in her thirty-odd years for the quasintly expressed reason that "divorces are too costly."

THE MDIVANI TRIO

The trial of two of the Mdivani brothers, charged with theft, in the city of our Lady of the Angels is not a very savory proceeding or story. It began in Batum, that city of oil and ships on the Black Sea, in the province of Georgi of Russia. The year was 1921, with our good old Uncle Sam still having a finger in the pie. The Red Terror was at its height, with Lenin and Trotsky at war against the Whites of Denekin, Yudenich and Kolchak—a war with no quarter asked or given.

The Red Army took the road to the south, and Rear Admiral Bristol of the United States Navy took to the sea and beat the Red Legions to Batum. The Menshavik refugees were taken aboard by the American admiral to save them from slaughter by the oncoming Reds. And among the refugees were three very young and undoubtedly frightened young men named Alexas, Serge and David.

Presently David and Serge found their way to the United States and to Hollywood, a land of glittering opportunity for young men who were seeking their fortune. Soon it developed that two young movie extras working for $25 a week or so were princes. At least they said they were, though Paris was quite familiar with the interesting story of how Clifford B. Harmon, one of America's pioneer aviators, had conferred the title of princess upon the sister.

The grande dames of the silent screen tagged two of the brothers. Mae Murray appropriating David and Pola Negri leading Serge to the altar. Both girls eventually lost their taste for the Mdivanis and divorced them, but only a little while ago the third brother, Alexis, bobbed up as a successful suitor for the hand of Barbara Hutton, heiress to $40,000,000 of the great estate so patiently and shrewedly accumulated by her grandfather, ten cents at a time, in the great Woolworth chain of stores.

Such is the bizarre tale of the three young men from the Caucasus who figure so prominently in the news of the day. Serge and David are charged with the theft of $37,000 from an oil company. Alexis is fleeing from a subpoena to appear at the same trial, and his flight has separated him from his bride, with whom he was traveling in the Orient. A strange story. Maybe there is no moral in it, but there ought to be a novel in it. Its the stuff that fiction is made of.
